THE GREATEST TEAMS IN THE

WILLIE McKEITHAN FETZER

ROBERT ALLISON FETZER

FOLLOWING the Fall of 1921, notable because of Carolina's most disastrous football season in recent years, the University athletic authorities made a tremendously important announcement relative to the Institution's future athletic policies. The old, irregular haphazard method of employing coaches, an uncertain process with no set standards for selection, involving a change for practically every season and sport and always proving troublesome and unsatisfactory, was to be abandoned once and for all. This, in itself, was good news to University folk everywhere. The erratic results of the few years prior, with now a season of spectacular success and now a season of dismal failure, had produced a desire among the athletic followers of this Institution for any change, trusting it to be for the better. But the announcement was received with unanimous applause, not so much because it marked a vital change in the athletic policies of the University but because it was accompanied by the definite action of acquiring the services here of Coaches Bill and Bob Fetzer. A two-year contract had been signed by two of the South's best known and most celebrated coaches, men who had been remarkably and consistently successful in developing winning teams.

Willie McKeithan Fetzer, named in this first contract as head coach of athletics at the University of North Carolina, was educated at Davidson College where he distinguished himself in football and baseball, starring in both these sports. Here he was also prominent in other undergraduate activities, and was a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. In 1905, after two years at Davidson, he began his coaching career, taking charge of athletics at Fishburne Military School. For seven years he remained at Fishburne and turned out during this period some of the finest preparatory teams ever to perform in Virginia. He moved over to Staunton Military Academy during the session of 1911-1912, but returned to Fishburne in 1913 and was there until he was employed as head football and baseball coach at Davidson in 1915. Coach Fetzer then did some of his most remarkable work, developing teams that became known throughout the land for their indomitable fighting spirit; teams that won against foes from much larger colleges. His phenomenal success with the "Fighting Wildcats" at Davidson made the name of Fetzer spread abroad as one of powerful significance in Southern college athletics, and in 1919 he accepted a most flattering offer to coach at North Carolina State College. He was there for one college term and a part of another, and more laurels were added to his notable record. Then, in January, 1921, he came to Carolina, with his brother as assistant, to raise our athletics out of the mire and give them the famous Fetzer fight and winning ability.

Robert Allison Fetzer, three years younger than Coach Bill, has devoted his coaching experience chiefly to track and football. He, too, received his education at Davidson College where he studied for five years and secured his A. B. and M. S. degrees. Like his brother he was prominent among many undergraduate activities and became a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. He was a stellar track man and a star of almost as great distinction on the gridiron, although his physique was more naturally adapted to the former sport. In his graduate year he coached the football scrubs and the following year coached at Clemson College. From Clemson he went to Woodberry Forest School in Virginia and was highly successful with four years' coaching there. He returned to Davidson as football coach in 1914, but gave his work up the following year and accepted a position with the Southern Cotton Oil Company, remaining with this enterprise until 1919, but the lure of the athletic whistle was too strong, and he responded to the call in 1919 by returning to Woodberry Forest and coaching football and track there for two years with the same success as in the old days. There he was situated when negotiations were finally completed that brought him to Carolina.

So, through Fortune's smiles on this Institution, the Fetzers came here, and recently when their initial contract expired, to the joy of followers of sports throughout the South interested in Carolina's welfare, these two masters of the coaching art signed a new contract to give their services here for five years more, with the prospect that their stay here will be indefinite. All of us know of the magnificent successes they have had here. State Championship teams in football, track, basketball, baseball, and tennis, with Southern Championships in the three latter sports, and victories over ancient rivals becoming commonplace rather than exceptional—these are feats under the administration of the Fetzers.

Even so, the Editors of the YACKETY YACK would not have considered dedicating the year book to these men if simply developing winning teams for Carolina had been their sole function here. The Fetzers have done much more than that here, just as they have everywhere else they have been. They have ever stood for fair sport and clean play—champions for right as well as might, for all that is finest and most admirable in college athletics. They won the hearts of Carolina men from the outset because their attitudes and ideals of sport coincided precisely with the spirit of Carolina—the traditional spirit we like to associate with such institutions as Davie Poplar, the Well, Old South The YACKETY YACK of 1923 is dedicated to two true exponents of the best that can be found in one of the most important of the student activities.

To present to our fellow-students a record of their achievements on the campus for the past year.

To awaken in the hearts of those who came before us, the sweet reminiscences and recollections of former days.

To portray as best we know how the Spirit of Old Blue and White.

OTTIS LADEAU ADER

Lexington, N. C.

Age, 23; Height 6 feet; Weight, 165

Degree, M.D.; Life Work, Medicine

Elisha Scientific Society; North Carolina Club; Medical Society; Davidson County Club, President.

ADER not only stands at the top of the roll book, but stands high in many excellent qualities. He is one of those steady, persistent fellows who have blazed the trail for the Class of '23. His career here has justly proved that he does not belong to the small town "cake-eater" class—nor to those who sling the old "bovine". He is quite a pugnacious fellow and is especially skillful with the knife when it comes to dissecting "stiffs", and his favorite pastime is "leaning over the bones".

He was known on one occasion to forsake the "cultured" East and go to the Wild and Woolly West with his "educational work", to offer knowledge to all who were willing to pay the price.

"O. L." has a strong personality, and his winning and chemotactic ways make the "fair ones fall for him", although they are never able to distract him from his work.

All these excellent qualities, together with many more, make him a student of the highest type and a dependable and trustworthy friend all of which foretells his success as a coming physician.

Degree, Ph.G.; Life Work, Pharmacist

S. P. S., Secretary, '23, President, '22; A. P. A.; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

JAKE", though little, fat, scholarly, and proud, is an all-round good egg. He came on a boat from Wake Forest and anchored in the pharmacy school. "Jake" is a fellow who never says much, but who knows pharmacy from Alpha to Omega, and can make anything in the lab from cornplasters to Staconb. The unsolved mystery is how he got the job of Tax Collector of Edenton during the Christmas of 1922. We are afraid that "Jake" is going into matrimony, and thus greatly decrease the receipts from the sale of stamps. Be that as it may his classmates and Alma Mater will have no better friend than "Jake".

EDWARD JOHNSTON ALEXANDER

Asheville, N. C.

Age, 21; Height, 5 feet 10 inches; Weight, 125

Degree, B.S. in Geology; Life Work, Geology

Buncombe County Club; Di Society; Geological Club; Assistant in Geology; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society; Order of The Nautilus.

E. J. ALEXANDER started his career on the campus as the Secretary of Collier Cobb, which in itself was a rather auspicious beginning for any man who wanted to graduate with ease and geology.

Now, it is not known to what extent this lad was exposed to Collier's courses, but suffice it to say that he is graduating as per schedule and with a number of good grades on his side of the ledger at that.

"E.J." has confined himself closely to his academic work and his secretarial duties throughout his college career. Campus politics attracted him not, and but few of the other extra-curriculum activities.

Nevertheless, he has made a record in his chosen field of study, and all upper classmen and Freshmen who have come in contact with him have been impressed by this seriousness of purpose with its admixture of native wit.

He has selected no special field of service for his life work as yet, but once he has made a choice his everlasting stick-to-it-ness will stand him in good stead.

JOSEPH THOMAS ALLEN

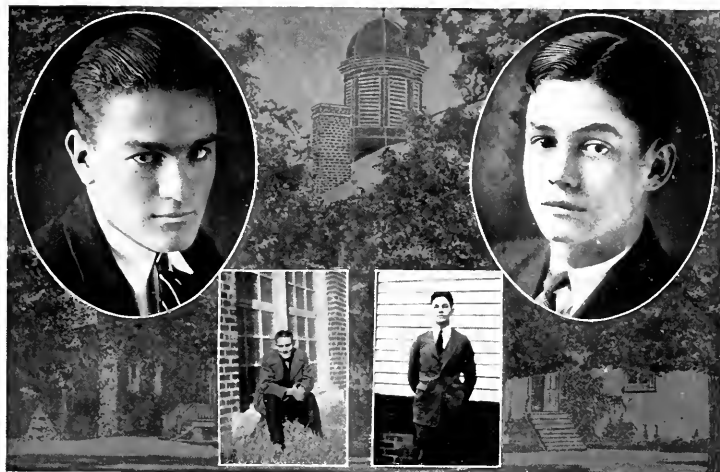

Gibsonville, N. C.

Age, 25; Height, 5 feet 6 inches; Weight 140

Degree, Candidate for LL.B.; Life Work, Lawyer

Di Society; A. E. F. Club; Guilford County Club; Associate Editor N. C. Law Review; Ruffin Law Club; Freshman Baseball.

JUDGE" ALLEN is one of the bright heads in our second-year law class; his strawberry colored locks would indicate as much. Entering the University in the Class of '23, "Judge" has waded into his studies with a vim and determination that bids fair to surmount all difficulties even Dean McGehee's Real Property. In fact, this is Allen's favorite course—in other respects he is perfectly normal. In his character is embodied all those gentlemanly traits which go to make up what Carolina men fondly designate as a "good egg". He is of a modest and retiring manner; he does not get on the honsetops and proclaim his abilities; neither does he unduly exert himself to acquire friends; but to those who know him well he is a jolly good fellow. He fights life's battles with the same pertinacity as he did the Hindenburg line as an officer, and as he has the law, the future augurs well for him.

HERE'S an "angel" without the proverbial wings. Possibly he will get them some day. At present, though, Tom is quite sure that his E.E. will do him more good.

Tom entered with the Class of '22, but we are selfishly glad that he is a loyal member of '23. He is one of those fellows who are going to develop the potentialities of North Carolina into actualities. General Electric or Westinghouse Electric Co. would be wise in getting Tom to work for them, but we hope he stays in his native State. We have need of him here. Sturdy, firm, sincere, Tom upholds the high record of those Tar Heel mountaineers of whom we are all proud. He hasn't told us about that little girl in Franklin, but we are certain there's one there who exclaims, without using a capital A. "He's an angel." Luck to you Tom.

THE state of any society is fundamentally regulated by the elements within it. That element which has the greatest influence upon making this State a sound and wholesome one is composed of those members who do their several tasks in an irreproachable manner and who are constantly alert to the necessity of solving the problems that society gives birth to and encounters, most thoroughly and wisely.

Charlie during his life here at the University has clearly proven himself to be this type of a citizen. Thus he has made an excellent scholarship record and has proven himself trustworthy and capable to such an extent that he has been the confidant of the student body and his immediate associates in several notable instances. He has chosen to enter the field of medicine as his lifework, and intends to remain at the University as a student of that science for the next two years. Thus the Class of '23 will leave behind it a representative who is an excellent example of the best that there is in it.

SKIN" is one of those exceptions to the law of proportions. His spirit cannot, in any way, be compared to his somewhat diminutive stature. He is something of a student, but he has enough of the practical to make an ingenious combination. We have no doubt but that if he had desired to do so, he would be wearing the much coveted key. Everyone who comes in contact with "Skin" will be his friend; he has a most pleasing personality and the ability to melt down the cold reserve of anyone he comes to meet. The only grudge he can possibly have when he leaves us will be against French 3 and Accounting I; and this only goes to prove his remarkable intelligence. His participation in college activities has not been so widespread, but he has by no means missed the college spirit. We predict for him a great success in the banking field. "Luck to you, "Skin".

WHETHER it be at Meredith, N.C.C.W., G.C.W., or elsewhere, when Carl appears there's a happy smile on many a girl's face. But this nice looking young man has friends wherever he is known. Whether on the campus, on de Roulet's history class or on the floor of the Phi Assembly, "N.C." is recognized as a leader. He has a most radiating personality, kind disposition, and he's full of pep. We are sure such a man will be a success in whatever occupation he enters. We had hopes of him being a great lawyer, but we fear that ere he teaches history a year, some fair daughter of this State will have robbed the legal profession of a most promising member. "N.C.", our heartiest wishes go with you.

CERTAINLY no member of the Class of 1923 possesses a keener insight into human nature than does this gentleman. From this, no doubt, has sprung the wit and good humor that pervade his relations with his fellows. His conspicuous position since the beginning of his college career among the Artists' Group of the campus, permits one to address him as the "Head of the School of Applied Art"—in drawing.

If we were told to pick from the ranks of this class those members who most clearly exhibited traits derived from English forbears, we would choose John T., and place him on the list before seeking for others. In this Democratic society of ours such a statement as this requires explanation. Finally, we cite him as the living disproof of the assertion that the Englishman does not appreciate wit, and then close by attributing not a small share of this gentleman's success to a process of Americanization extending to the past for the space of many generations.

AT THE beginning of the year, "J.T." needed fourteen courses for graduation, but rather than drop into the Class of 1924 he decided to pass them all, thereby proving himself a man for almost any emergency. "J.T." is well known on the Hill and at Sweet Briar for many social accomplishments. He figures prominently at all the dances. Quiet and dignified, he never seeks popularity or goes out of his way to make friends. His pleasing personality, high principles, and natural ability will bring him success in most any undertaking.

JIM" entered as a Freshman with '23, but severed his direct affiliation with us at the end of his Sophomore year when he entered the School of Law—a loss which we would not willingly have undergone. However, since he has contributed so materially to the welfare of his Law Class, '23 feels as if it has made a distinct contribution to the School of Law.

The impression that one gathers from association with "Jim" is that this man has arrived at a stage where he can be depended upon to face the problems of life with the determination of solving them wisely and fully. He has developed a taste for good literature which has afforded him thought as well as pleasure. The respect and confidence with which his fellow students regard him is exemplified in their election of him as their representative upon the Student Council and the Campus Cabinet.

HERE is a man who has enjoyed his entire process of "being educated". Though he has an ultimate intention of following his fellow-countyman, Ballard Gay, into the camp of the lawyers, his chief college interest has led many to think that probably the "Great American Novel" would not remain unwritten after all.

Those who have gathered weekly in the Hall of the Phi Assembly will remember J. J. Beale as one of the chief motive forces in the progressing life of the body. When an intercollegiate debate preliminary rolled around during the past two years it always found "J.J." on hand ready to attempt a landing and move on into the finals. Moreover, close friends have been heard to express the belief that he was very likely to get into the "finals" of a certain sort of pretty definite alliance at most any time.

CLAYTON GILES BELLAMY, alias "Iky", known among his classmates as the chief exponent of the old Southern gentlemen and week-end trips.

It may be honestly averred that all the week-ends he has spent on the "Hill" during his college course might be counted on the fingers of two hands. His most characteristic remark is les' go to Raleigh this week-end".

Also, it might be mentioned that his nickname was acquired as a result of these trips, as witness another characteristic remark: "Boys, this trip cost me a bunch of money; I spent almost two dollars".

Incidentally, "Iky" has been somewhat of an organization hound and has pushed the grade requisite for the coveted key very close; in fact, if education courses had lasted a little longer he might have acquired the Phi Beta Kappa charm.

A likable chap with his classmates and the feminine quota at the dances, who with his endowment of plausible "gab" will win cases when he enters upon his profession—law.

DEAN" BENBOW came to us from East Bend, a place said to be a few miles just north from somewhere. Here his youthful days were spent in becoming a noted fox hunter. His fondness for the chase and skill therein was surpassed probably only by Sir Sid himself. His knowledge of the anatomy of a rabbit was well established even before he entered Davie Hall as one of Froggie's most promising students of zoology and since then he has shown himself capable of learning the higher phases of the science with an interest and facility hard to surpass.

Ben's thoroughness was well demonstrated in his academic work when he convinced Billy Noble that he knew how many miles of railroad there were in his home county.

As a capable student, Ben is one of our best. In his assistantship to Dr. Bullitt in bacteriology and pathology he has proved his adeptness as a technician and promises to be a worthy and true follower of Hippocrates. His friends are many as are anyone's who is as congenial and has a heart as big as Ben's.

BEST came to the University in 1919 and after a stay of two years in the academic school decided that pharmacy was his calling. We find him at his work, day after day, always moving on, for his work is his play. From observations at odd times in the laboratory we predict, "As Dr. E. V. says" he will be one that will "get his and go on".

He has always played the game straight through with us, not knowing discouragement or setback. To any man that is ready to help when and where he can, the future is in waiting and extending a welcome hand. Best may not be the best, but he's Chero-Cola and "there's none so good".

BODDIE entered with the Class of 1922, but we are glad to have him as a member of the "grand old class" of '23. Boddie is one of those grand, husky sons of North Carolina who comes from a tribe who hold up their pants with one suspender, fastened on with a tennepenny nail, and chew the weed of their own growth for a pastime. Such men are the backbone of their State. Boddie is a quiet, unassuming young man yet he is a most likable, straightforward, reliable friend. There's no dross in Boddie; he is all steel; he will do his utmost for his friends. Were we to speak of his negative qualities we would say: "He's no 'Cake-Eater', nor related to any of that tribe". Boddie is a good scout and we wish him success in his occupation. He is a wizard in electricity, and this knowledge has been the cause of many of his friends jumping out of bed in the wee sma' hours of the night, a victim of the "H.T. Club", of which he is president. Boddie likes his joke. Our last wish is: may some nice girl capture him.

IT IS not when one laughs that one is really happy—"Johnnie" is always happy; his smile is a part of him; whether it be in the gym, collecting German Club fees, at a class meeting, in the lecture room, or at the Easter dances. That same bright, cheerful disposition is ever present. It has made him numerous friends, both among his classmates and the faculty. Five years of academic work, together with many honors, has brought out the man in John; yet the fire of laughing, reckless youth is untampered, and we find him appreciating life with the keenest zeal. Wherein the boy in John is incomparable. Old age will never be a burden for him to carry. His eyes brim with understanding and a spark of mischief which plays havoc with the hearts of the fair sex. Time will pass, success will crown John's efforts, and when we look back into yesterdays spent on Carolina's Campus we shall still see John the boy, as well as John the man, and we can say as we do today—Our Friend.

AFTER two years of life as a cadet, "Lucy" left the barracks of V. M. I. and came here to enter the Junior Class.

Rather tall and slender, somewhat reserved, and with a military air, he saunters, immaculately dressed, about the Campus. This is the impression he conveys on first observation. On better acquaintance it is discovered that he is from "Winchester, Virginia, Suh!", but not averse to sampling the beverages of North Carolina. His one trouble in life is the effect of frost on the apple crop, which causes a momentary cloud on the otherwise serene horizon. As for the girls—it wouldn't worry "Lucy" if they did not exist. "Say, 'Lucy', I just made a date for you with—" "You did? Well, I just told Moody I was going to Durham!"

THE curtain goes up and we see Catharine in "Reward Offered"; there is a basketball practice and we see her as the star player; there is a dance and she gets the "rush" of the evening; there is an honor roll and her name is sure to be on it.

It is a mystery to all of us how Catharine is a star in the Play-Makers, and Chairman of the Woman's Athletic Committee; how she makes the honor roll; and still has a date every night; how she has bobbed her hair and yet is not a flapper. She is never too busy to help those who need her; rather, it seems a pleasure to her to be able to help others. On Horace's philosophy class she looks every bit the philosopher; on the Campus she sets many a lad's heart a-fluttering. She is an all-round good sport. Lucky will be the man who can claim her his own. When the Sphinx solves the riddle we want Catharine to tell us how she manages to do it all.

JOHN HUGH BRADFORD

Degree, A.B.; Life Work, Medicine

Di Society; Mecklenburg County Club.

THIS sturdy son of Mecklenburg has denied many the privilege of knowing him during his stay here, and it has indeed been a privilege, as those who know him will agree. He hails from the same community as the "Rattys", but don't hold that against him for he couldn't help it, and he really is a man of little "bull" and many facts.

John is a conscientious person and is laying a good foundation for the profession he has chosen. We know he will make a good doctor and be in demand by everyone, especially the weaker sex, for he has that winning personality, etc. John's praises could be continued, but it is sufficient to say, "There is a man. We wish him luck."

THE man who applies himself diligently to his task will ultimately triumph. "Burney" is a man of that type. Firm in his convictions, yet willing to learn, he faces the eternal conflict with a steadiness of purpose that will go far toward making life a success. Receding horizons and a clearer vision as he works upward in his profession is what we predict. "Burney's" personality and general disposition have won for him a place in the hearts of both the faculty and his fellow students. We bid him adieu with regret, and will remember him always as a friend.

MAC is a republican, a "professor" of psychology, an intercollegiate debater, an exponent of applied political science, and a great fellow. Strong of heart, clear of head, full of wit, satire, fun and repartee, and that all-inclusive word, "life". "Mac" has made the four years of college life happy for a lot of us. And, too, he has made the four years of college count for something. As a Senior, we find him President of the Dialectic Literary Society, and thrice an intercollegiate debater. His college goal has been reached and we are happy in his success. He contends that the State of North Carolina will never come into its own until the younger republicans get in power. He says that he intends to help get them in power. Now we have great admiration for "Mac", and we think a lot of his ability, but we do wish he would leave off starting on this wildgoose chase and forsake the paths of political evil and come into the folds of the righteous, i.e., the democratic party. If he will do that we will nearly promise to vote for him for legislator, congressman, or justice of the peace, for whichever he prefers to run.

HERE'S a man who commands the respect of all of us. He is one of the few men here against whom we have heard no word of reproach. Anything good you may say will apply to Roy. He is quiet and, almost unconsciously, naive, yet no man here has a greater host of friends. When we need help we don't mind calling upon "R.E."; we know he will help us, and we can depend on what he says. In him we see the possibilities of one of the biggest ministers of the gospel in the Baptist faith. But whether he becomes a minister of the gospel, teacher, or lawyer, we are expecting him to succeed. We are inclined to believe that there is a certain girl with designs upon Roy, and not unwisely. Luck to you, Roy; we wish you much success.

*"The glass of fashion, the mold of form;
The observed of all observers."*

HERE is a man who can grace a drawing-room with as much ease as old Chesterfield himself; he just naturally "looks" the part of a Matinee Idol, though in truth "San" always Cavorts at night.

"San" Brown began his career here by playing a big part in student life and student activities and he has been keeping it up ever since. Picked for class president he took the job his first year and never has gone back into oblivion from the day he was elected.

"San" can do lots of things. He can play football along with Carolina's famous team, and (although he never quite measured up to his publicity in the Fall of 1922) he contributed to his team's success by always being ready to do what he could. He has played basketball to the tune of an "N.C." and there are few things he hasn't done in his line while at Chapel Hill. At home on the athletic field he is, nevertheless, equally at home on the ballroom floor and an all-round good man.

BILL" came here with a very good opinion of his home town—so have many others. Although others have lost such hope, "Bill" still expects Greensboro to be a city.

On the Campus you see "Bill" either going to Chemistry Hall or coming from Chemistry Hall. He, when he was younger, enjoyed to talk about the newly-found ways of making the real and of the efficient means of distinguishing METHEL. He now studies chemistry with the idea of aiding humanity when he has finished here.

He is interested in other things than chemistry. He is now much interested in Society—a member of it. His many other activities are: rushing to Swain Hall each morning before the door closes; reading the world's almanac; and writing a daily letter to one who deserves the best.

"Bill" is sure to accomplish those things in life that can be accomplished through the application of a principle to real, every-day human life.

SHAG" joined us at the beginning of our Junior year after having spent two years at Trinity College. Studious, athletic, friendly and a good sport, makes the combination we have in the person of "Shag" Bruton. His changing of colleges prevents him from wearing a Phi Beta Kappa key. However, he has the scholarship grades to his credit. He is one of those characters who can play tennis or football every afternoon and still make good grades on his studies. When "Shag" came here from Trinity he brought this name and tennis ability with him. He used this ability and determination and he now possesses the coveted monogram. He solves his problems in higher math as easily as he plays tennis. In fact, he has not come in contact with anything that causes him the least worry. His ambitions are high and the word "impossible" is not in his vocabulary. To this man all things are probable; and no matter how mysterious it may seem here we have a personality who believes in his strength and ability to solve the mystery. A great mind and a healthy body spells the future for this man of the Class of 1923.

HERMAN is vice-president of our Class, a successful athlete and a devotee of geology. It has not been definitely determined whether he is the gentleman who placed a great mass of hard rock in the "pudding" which for awhile was served in the Geology Building. We just cannot convince ourselves that he would be a party to such an awful procedure.

We do not know, however, that this gentleman served a number of impossible offerings to the University of Virginia baseball team his Junior year, a feat which won for him the gratitude of the student body. When he enters the distant oilfields or trails along a mossy cragged series of boulders, he will carry with him the esteem and well wishes of his classmates.

BEHOLD a Tar Heel bred and born. Although "Burlic" gives his present address as Tennessee, Tarheia has the first claim on him. "Burlic" is one of these sturdy mountaineers that North Carolina so proudly boasts of. In his Freshman year he went out for football and has been seen in uniform every Fall since. This one fact reveals the chief characteristic of this young giant: although he didn't make the first team, he stuck to it, and by this faithful and never-give-up spirit plugged on, taking the knocks and blows that his Alma Mater might revenge herself against her most ancient rival. Men like him have helped to put out the greatest football team in the history of the University. We are proud of "Burlic"; his host of friends attest to the fact. We have only good thoughts of him. May he continue to live his life as we know him at Carolina.

SNOOKS" is small in stature but big in heart, although it may be a little hypertrophied from over-use—judging from the N. C. College daily. Anyway, his aesthetic ideals are of the highest type and she seems to be "all for him". But above other things, "M.P." is thoroughly interested in his work.

It was in the days of the famous S. A. T. C. that Byerly first caught the Carolina spirit and that there was born in him the anticipation that our beloved U.N.C. should become his Alma Mater. Early in his academic years he decided to follow in the footsteps of his cousin and uncle in the study of medicine. His academic and pre-medical work was above the average, as shown by his acceptance in the Medical School, and his ardor, zeal, and keen perception account for the excellent work he has done as a medical student. These outstanding traits, together with his congenial and pleasant disposition which has won for him the love and respect of his classmates, indicate for him a brilliant doctor's career.

KANSAS BYERS

Graduated at Davenport College, 1912.

NO USE talking! Kansas is a nice girl, even if she does start fads among the co-eds such as the use of dog-mange for prolonging and thickening the hairs on our heads. Now, if it hadn't been for that silly French, she would have had more time for S.S.'s and T.L.'s—whatever they are. Anyway, she can tell you of many flames, et cetera, of the past. But, seriously, you couldn't find a better pal than Kansas. Why, even the Mathan baby cries for her, and she has a "boot" on Charlie and Minnie! Sometimes we think she works too hard—Foerster papers are always depressing—but she revives quickly and comes back again with renewed vigor and a bright outlook on life. That's one of her charms—her enthusiasm. She's not all bookworm, by any means, though she's a good student; just remember, she had to get off 12½ courses. And the best part is her good, hard-down common sense which is combined with such an unselfish nature that she expects—and therefore nearly always gets—unselfish treatment from others! If you want a taste of true Southern hospitality, visit her the next time you go to Washington City. She'll welcome you because you are from Carolina!

RICHARD CARTWRIGHT CARMICHAEL
Durham, N. C.

HERE'S to the classiest basketballer Carolina has ever produced, and that is saying a great deal when you consider that we have had players of the caliber of "Mebe" Long, "Fats" Hanby, "Monk" McDonald, and a row of other "Lights". In a word, "Cart" is a flash on the Basketball court and gained Championship near perfection in his line. He piloted the Carolina Southern Quint of '22, and was picked as All-Southern Center by Atlanta sport-writers. "Cart" also plays baseball and football.

With a striking personality, affable disposition, and individualistic qualities, "Cart's" closer friends recognize in him a potential leader. If he will stick in there and fight the game of life as energetically as he fights on the basketball court against Trinity and Virginia, we predict for him a brilliant success.

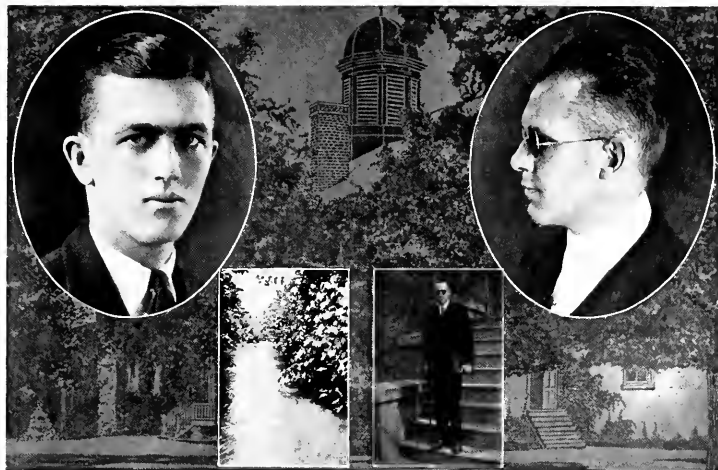

CURTIS CALVIN CARROLL
Mizpah, N. C.

Age, 23; Height, 5 feet 9 inches; Weight, 155

Degree, B.A.; Life Work, Farming

CARROLL, or "Hat" as he is better known to some of us, entered with the Class of 1922, but decided during his Sophomore year that he was needed more at home than here and so he journeyed back to Stokes County to settle down on the farm for a few months of quiet life. During that time he changed his mind and instead of being a chemist he is now planning to instruct the fair youth of the land for some time. Later, he will settle down back somewhere in his good old County of Stokes and make for her a farmer that she will be proud to call her own.

Carroll is a good student, and a very likable fellow to those who know him. He is not known altogether as well as his brother, D.D., but those of us who know him like him as well. He has made good grades during his college career. Among his courses we might place "Billy" Noble Education and the "PICK". He says that his best grades are on the Pick as he "grats" that the least of any of them. But coming back to the real thing, the Class of 1923 is glad that he belongs to us and we know that he will make a son that the University, as well as the Class will be glad to claim.

Look him over, from head to foot,
How much would you think he's worth;
A dollar, a dime, a nickel?
Why, he's the wealthiest man on earth.

John is as slow as the proverbial train through Arkansas, yet on the other hand he is a "man of few words," and when he draws through an expression you may know that you've heard a parable. He came to us from South Carolina where everybody is said to be able to trace their descendency to Noah. We send him back to his home State, or wherever he may roam, a better man for having been here; and we leave, better men for having known him.

HERE'S to Sam! We take off our hats to him, for he is a real man. We can pay him no better tribute. Coming from the mountain country, Sam seems to have absorbed some of the everlasting hills, for he is essentially a fighter. Handicapped by blindness, Sam has fought his way through the University, and on graduation day stands as one of the real leaders of the good old Class of '23. Clear of head, forceful in personality, full of life and fun. Sam holds the esteem and admiration of all of us. He has always championed Campus reform measures. We all like him and we want to see Sam successful in the future, not only in the legal profession but in political matters as well. We want to see him happy, successful, and leading a useful life. His career here has demonstrated his ability, and his pluckiness in overcoming his great handicap shows that where there is a will there is a way. Henley, in his poem, "Invictus", speaks for Sam as well as himself, when he says:

"It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishment the scroll,
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul".

JACK and his side-partner, June Horner, reigned supreme in the former's first year as two stalwart representatives from the "Land of the Sky". June graduated in June, 1921, while John Cheesborough advanced into the ranks of the upperclassmen. When the second quarter of the present year came to a close it presented to the University authorities this man and instructed them to place him among the alumni right then and there.

Jack is an ardent interpreter and relater of the fine things which are peculiar to Asheville and the entire lofty section. He likes to join a group and talk about the current affairs, and the tone of his voice, as well as the saneness of dissertations, adds authority to his word. Such a man would be successful "on the hustings". Jack has been well known and well liked throughout his University career.

HERE, gentle reader, is the oldest man in the class. He held education in such high esteem that at an age when most men are wondering how their grandchildren are going to turn out he decided to return to college for a degree.

Seriousness of purpose and a profound belief in the consecration of the life of the public school teacher are the most marked characteristics of R. F. Coats. His intimates have known him as a man with a definite goal in sight—to fit the children of men for a higher and better life—and he has not strayed from his path in one particular.

Coats has also been a staunch supporter of the Phi Society, and his voice has often been heard within its walls, whenever an occasion arose to support truth of error.

The Class of 1923 sends him on his way with the belief that he will make elbow room for himself among the educators of the State.

COLE hails from the incubator of student councilmen; the royal hunting grounds of Sovereign Harmon of the student Body. We watch him closely to see if he will have any of those virtues of leadership displayed by his fellow townsman.

Summer school life held for this enamoured swain a charm which penetrates to few of us. It is rumored that it was at the Carolina summer school he met his goddess, and that Davenport College is now his shrine, to which he makes weekly pilgrimages from the Hill.

"Von Stuhlman" has an ardent follower and disciple in Roy, for in the field of physics his mess struts itself. Here, indeed, he is at his best and his ability shines. We hope Sir Oliver Lodge will never feel embarrassed while in his presence in learned conversation.

Optimism is no burden to Roy. He revels in it; delights in its presence. But perhaps there are reasons for his optimistic attitude. Davenport College and Durham may have something to do with it.

JUNE", "Fantorts", "Tops", as he is variously called, began his career with the Class of 1923 as an elongated youth fresh from Oxford Town in ye County of Granville.

Swinging into his majors even in his Freshman year he has remained supreme in them during his four years of college. The first of these majors is Spanish. In literature he has traveled under the guidance of Dr. Leavitt from the Spanish-American Countries through the shums of Old Madrid. In fact, he has taken a trip to Cuba, as he affirms, to become acquainted with the Spanish customs. This visit seems to have been even more successful than his trips into literature have been, for "June" is known to receive dainty notes bearing a Cuban postmark.

"Tops" other major has been bridge. It has been admitted that when "Tops" bids a "Brace of No Trumps" he can usually take at least three tricks for the game. He plays the game with a master mind and if he can finesse a bank out of a loan for the cotton mill business as easily as he can finesse the queen of spades he will make an undaunted success.

Here is a man who not only braved the terrors of this demon but also conquered it fully and rose in time to be one of the interpreters attached to the staff.

"Squash" belongs to the world of business. In this field does his primary interest lie. He has taken a leading part in the various social activities which have been a part of the life on the Campus and has shown a live interest in such Campus affairs as are ordinarily classed under the head of student "Affairs of State". There is probably no other member of '23 who enjoys a live conversation with a group of his fellows more than "Squash" does. The Sociologists say that there is no better method than this through which to develop the social instinct.

GRACE" hails from the great metropolis of Gastonia, but we must not hold this against him for he has made remarkable efforts to live this misfortune down. His Elonic attitude is an ever-present help in times of trouble, especially when he thinks it best to "grat" Dr. Howell's ten-twenty.

Some say that he is inclined to have a good eye in spotting beauties of the weaker sex, but be that as it may we do know that he often drinks chocolate milks, bums cigarettes, and stays out until nine o'clock.

Being tall and stately he upholds the dignity of our class. A good student, a great hand in rolling pills, and a valuable man to our class. We send him forth to his well chosen profession with the best of wishes.

CATHERINE is her name, but she is just "Kitty" to us. This attractive little co-ed has the distinction of being the youngest one of her sex to have entered the Medical School at Carolina. For two years she withstood successfully the bombardment of "Froggie" Wilson, and is still as impregnable against the "Balance of Power" in the Med School.

Her success can be attributed to her ability, for it is certain, nevertheless we can't disregard the effectiveness of her fascinating ways and art of "hooting".

Much could be said about this "little vamping Venus" of the Med School, but to those who have seen her no description in words need be given—especially to our students of picturesque form. She stays there and fights all day long, but at night she likes to forget her troubles for awhile and always spends a part of it at the "Pick". Those of the fair sex are few who have the nerve to enter medicine as a profession, and fewer still who have pluck to see it through. After all is said and done we predict a successful career for Kitty.

AMOS J. (Pat) Cummings, known chiefly in the hall of fame as the champion horse-shoe tosser of the Campus leaves this institution with a regret deeper than that of any of his classmates.

"Pat" entered before the class, but dropped out for several years and recreated himself as a teacher of mathematics and military science at Oak Ridge. He came back this year for his degree, and so graduates as a member of the Class of 1923.

He can read French as well as pitch horseshoes, as witness numerous good grades to his credit at the office of the registrar. In addition to teaching at Oak Ridge he had an interregnum of several months at Washington and Lee, but finally decided the Davie poplar was more interesting than anything in the historic valley, and came back to his original Alma Mater.

Some years ago, "Pat" kissed the blarney stone and acquired his nickname as well as the rich vein of mother wit which marks his conversation.

Teacher; French scholar; horseshoe twirler; and ladies' man—Ave atque vale.

H. C. CUNNINGHAM

WE HAVE with us tonight—one of the wisest and most substantial Seniors in the group. "Parson" is not loquacious, nor is he ubiquitous. His usual hanging-out place has been his room, and in this he is a past master in the art of hospitality. If one of us has been confronted with a problem and sought Carrington's aid, he has always been ready to render it.

Carrington has two possessions which should afford him a great deal of pleasure in future life as they doubtless have in the past. One of these is a taste for good literature, the other a love for sports. The Winter holidays have afforded him a few days of good hunting around the ancestral seat of his family in Person County; while here his chief athletic interest has been developed upon the tennis court.

HARRY", the boy from the South and better known to his classmates as the boy after the girls' hearts, he has the appearance of a real saint, but you couldn't call him that because he really is a victim of crude dissipation; listerated gum and Herbert Tareyton cigarettes being his greatest enemies, but the greatest of all is to watch him make week-end trips to Durham where he finds Bragg's Shoe Store the most interesting place in town.

We all feel sure that he will make a girl a fine husband and be still greater in his profession.

L" has more names to her credit than the average person. Before we knew what L. F. P. C. meant we used to wonder how one hobbled-headed young lady could manage such a staggering array of initials. After much experimentation we decided that "C" stood for Chemistry. But the "F. P." remained an unknown until one day the formula was discovered. L. F. P. C. Lillie's Favorite Passion—Chemistry. And, to be sure, it is the most absorbing interest in her life. We suspect, however, that in spite of the number of courses that she gets off every quarter, "Lil" has time to talk to her friends if the occasion arises. She may always be found coming from or going to the Chemistry Building at certain hours of the day (we can scarcely state the exact time or the exact reason), but from all appearances the Episcopal Churchyard is well used. "Lil" prides herself on being frank, and sometimes we must admit she gets us "told". But we all like her and we all agree that she is a good sport.

STEVE DANIELS is a son of New Bern, N. C., where the hair on one's head naturally grows curly, for Steve has curls that all the girls rave over. His head, however, is more useful to him than simply as a place on which to raise nice hair. He uses it often for thinking purposes, and when he does speak what he has thought, he gives you not merely a piece of his mind—he gives you all of it.

Because of his intimate connection with so many of Dr. Leavitt's courses, it has been rumored that Steve has visions of a Spanish Castle all his own, with a dark-haired senorita to grace his domicile. We trust, however, that he will decide to remain in Good Old North Carolina where we are sure success awaits his efforts in the field of his choice.

SENATOR, as we know him, is considered the most energetic man in the Engineering School. We do not know how he came to get the name, but it is thought that is it due to his studious nature and uncanny ability to analyze the most intricate problems in complex quantities and harmonics of the Nth order.

He insists that his calling is engineering, but it is reported that he has inherited a farm and this probably accounts for the interest displayed in a recent issue of the "Cherryville Eagle". Notwithstanding what his calling may or may not be, "Senator" is sure to succeed, for he is a regular fellow and is always ready to fall in line with bridge sharks.

The "Senator" seems to have an amorous tendency for the fair sex, and it is feared that this may lead him into matrimonial complications early in his engineering career. If this happen we can only wish him the greatest success, as it is a well known fact that two heads are better than one.

THIS gentleman was the hero of a certain class in French 3 during the first quarter of his first year in the University. He certainly appeared heroic to one who approached the task of learning French as the instructor says one must, with a great deal of preliminary hard work. "Dick" assimilated the supply of irregular verbs with hardly any trouble.

"Dick" has the air of the thinker about him, and he is just exactly that type. He is always ready to discuss a question, no matter how difficult it is, and soon one finds him convinced that a certain solution is the correct one. He has convictions, yet he is ever open to further consideration if one can show him the advisability of such. "Dick" is one of the real men of the class, and that means with the other things that those of us who know him best, feel confident that we can depend upon him in the future.

WE REMEMBER Ditmore as a young Freshman "Sprout", particularly for his reaction to a rather speedy snowball hurled by an oppressing Sophomore. The subsequent battle was short and entirely in his favor.

With the scene changed, one year later, we see him in the role of the same tyrant whom he previously delighted to annihilate. The effervescence excited in the Freshman in this case was indeed to his detriment, following the piston-like batterings of Ditmore's fists.

The assumption is that he is a fighter. He is courageous in his ideas and quick to execute his convictions. In calmer moments he has a sunny temperament, a jovial disposition, and rational pride governs his every action. His is the distinction of having the rare ability to fathom the mind of Dr. Bullitt when he begins his daily rampage of interrogations. There is no more consistent and conscientious worker in the Medical School, and his grades are subsequently among the best. Our predictions for his success cannot be inflated, because he is an able man, and, what is more, he wears the stainless garments of a gentleman.

WHenever you want anything done well call on Annie and you'll get results. To those of us who knew her in the good old Saint Mary's days and again at Carolina, Annie stands out as the highest type of girl and the truest kind of friend.

Added to her other virtues, Annie has a good mind and what's more she knows how to use it. She has proved this to us on Dr. Williams' Philosophy Class. There are very few problems Annie can't see into before any of us know what it all means. She's one of Horace's pets, which fact alone attests to her ability. He often uses her to illustrate a certain point in philosophy, and this the noted philosopher doesn't do for those who are less philosophical. Annie has quite a long list of 1's and 2's down in Tommy J's office. But to summarize Annie in a few words is to call her true blue.

STILL water runs deep," says an old adage. The truth of this ancient proverb has been presented to us repeatedly in the person of Bruce Eagles. Handsome, cordial, always dressed with meticulous care, Bruce may be seen at any hour of the day, when he is not on class, posed in front of the postoffice, packing the cement in front of Patterson's, or hitting the trail down Franklin Avenue past the Presbyterian Church. But he is by no means idling his time away. We don't believe he is ever without a thought; and possibly that is why he answers the questions of his profs so well. When a question arises in connection with farm tenancy or consolidated schools, Bruce settles the matter with a calm yet authoritative comment. We wonder how he has preserved this calm and unruffled demeanor while rooming with such a notorious politician. Calm and dignified, yet he is not without a host of friends.

SOUTH CAROLINA has displayed interest in the University by sending to her a group of sons which any State can ill afford to have leave her borders. "Pres" hails from the Palmetto State and is a good representative of the best things for which that commonwealth has always stood.

"Pres" possesses a natural interest in athletics of all sorts. He has continually developed this interest, and to-day he wears the coveted "N.C." as a proof of his determination to achieve athletic success. He plays the violin in the choir of the Baptist Sunday School, attends the dances, and does good work in the classrooms, all of which indicates that "Pres" is a pretty versatile sort of a fellow. Moreover, he is an attractive fellow: quiet, determined, possessed of a marked humorous instinct, and thoroughly sincere.

THERE is something about Bruce that makes us all like him. He can make friends when others fail, and his friends are not all of the baser sex. The proposed tax on bachelors can cause him no worry. We would like to get his method or formula for feminine heart-winning; he would be doing a great service to the male members of the Class of 1923 if he would only tell us "how". On class, Bruce is a student, on the Campus he is very popular, and on the dance floor he "turns 'em all green with envy". Bruce is cordial, jovial, and energetic; he's an all-round good fellow. THE "tall, good-looking" who meanders daily from the Phi Delta Theta Hall to the Engineering Building and turns in lab reports which invariably come back with the grade 100 attached, who leads a dance or so every time Chapel Hill becomes social, and who takes life as a song, and education as a pleasant dream with an occasional nightmare that must be accounted for, is none other than one Engstrum, the lad from Washington. Ed is as much at home on the ballroom floor as Monk McDonald is on the athletic field. One associates him with Palm Beach, the Waldorf Astoria, Newport, and Asbury Park, and we have a vision of him breezing into some gay and gorgeous dinner party at a fashionable hotel with some beautiful girl—mayhap from Greensboro—on his arm. But the natural fit of Ed in grand society and the fact that he would look utterly out of place in an advertisement headed "What's wrong with this picture?" is not his all. He is as interesting and intellectual as he is handsome, and what is more, he is a darned good fellow!

We like him still more now that we see more of him on the campus. Cordial and frank, he has won many friends in the four years he has been with us, and we hope this friendship will not cease with our College career. Frank is very much a disciple of Horace Williams, and he is one for this grand old philosopher to be proud of. Frank can explain the "categorical relation" as well as Ty Potter. Forensics have no terror for him; joining the Phi Assembly in his Senior year he has shown us that he is a debater of no mean ability. Debater, philosopher, student, he is all of them. We are quite sure that just as he was successful in his business here he will be even more successful in the Big Business of Life. Our best wishes go with you, Frank.

IF IT be true "that a lion among ladies is a fearsome thing" then this Richmond County lad is a fearsome thing. The same might also be applied to the Carolina Playmakers and the University Glee Club.

LeGrand has a powerful bass voice and he has used it to advantage during four years. Also, he is one of the prides of Freddie Koch's Playmakers and producers, having played leading roles ever since his Freshman year.

However, his crowning triumph in the histrionic art was reserved for his Senior year when he made a tremendous hit as the Kalif of Kavak. He was in his heaven as the head of a harem, and acted the part in a manner that would have made Lionel Barrymore shed tears of envy.

He has been a popular and a prominent man in his class by reason of his good voice and histrionic ability as well as for his energy and enthusiasm in every phase of College life with which he has been thrown in contact.

BOB ("Snake" is his pet name) dotes on poetry, football, chemistry, and Caroline. He has not taken the first three as "crips", but he studies the latter far more extensively and intensively than ever he did the others, for, you see, even though inspired by Dan Cupid, it takes time (and stamps) to write two thirty-page letters and one poem a day.

Entering here as innocent of College ways as the most of us he has gone through swimmingly with everything that's here from R. O. T. C., English "21", Booloo, and Johnnie Booker, to those correspondence tilts with a dozen of the fairest whom he so loves. Always the same Bob, he has made about as many friends, had a better time, and is graduating about as early as any member of the class. With his abilities and disposition we predict a successful M.D., certainly a happy one. He has spent three years in 13 Old West and one in 15 Steele. We believe that some of these days Freshmen will say with oide; "Dr. Felton used to room in here".

AT FIRST we wondered why "Frondy" had such an unsightly walk until we went by his home and found him running over the hills of Gaston County, barefooted. Then we decided that shoes must hurt his feet while he sojourns with us.

As cheer leader during his Senior year he had to step into the shoes of a master of cheer leading, but "Frondy" has shown that he can lead a cheer and get a noise out of any bunch of husky youngsters.

As leader of the Blind Pullman League he has led expeditions on Richmond, Greensboro, and wherever there is a Carolina game and a bunch of penniless fellows who want to see the game.

As leader of the Exporters Club he is the most likable one of the whole group.

Laying all joking aside, "Frondy" is the life of any group in which you may find him. He has tried to do something of everything, and to hear him tell it has usually succeeded. He can tell tales so slick that beside making his audience believe them he almost believes them himself. With such a line he will certainly succeed as a lawyer.

GAMBLE, or "Walt" as he is often called, hails from the hills of Sparta. He has proved no exception to the general rule about people from the mountains, for he is good natured and a sport who is liked by all. Though he is apparently somewhat reserved, he is really a good mixer, especially with the members of the opposite sex. "Walt" is not only serious in his love affairs but also in his College work. During the four years, he has unfortunately been out of College for about two quarters; however, he is doing thirteen courses this year and finishing with the class. Though handicapped by heavy work, Gamble has made good grades on courses ranging from "Billy" Nohle's Education through Kent Brown's German, to and including "Dud" Carroll's Economics, making the later his major.

Just what Gamble will pursue for a life work is not definitely known. Sometimes he seems interested in the medical field, but it is probable that he will be an imparter of knowledge, at least next year. Whether in school-work or medicine, we wish him success.

WHOOPEE, girls, touchdown this time. Garvey has the ball. Not so loud as to be boisterous, but make it ring, girls, make it ring.

"F.K." came to us from Elon College; while preparing himself there for the field of medicine he was also quite active in those College activities which fall outside of the classroom. In the debating hall this youth from Wilkes played with Plato, roomed with Romeo, skipped with Scipio, and ripped with Euripides until his opponents realized the exact situation and gave up in despair. As a member of the Glee Club, Fred was good. His banjo, guitar, violin, or voice, as the case happened to be, could plainly be heard above any other noise, and in regard to athletics, so long as Garvey was in the game Elon never gave up hope of winning.

Immediately after entering the Medical he became a member of Dr. Mangum's Geskege Quartet.

Fred is that type of fellow who gains your friendship upon the first meeting and then holds it forever. His qualities are those which point toward an ideal physician and we expect to hear from him after he has completed his College career.

THOUGH from the standpoint of height in inches, "Grandpa" may be the smallest member of our class, this is by no means true when one considers the mental power which we, individually, may or may not possess. In our Freshman year he early became well known, and throughout the other years he has maintained his standing on the campus above reproach, and has proven his strength and ability.

History affords us many examples of men powerful in affairs of State and affairs military, who were extremely small in stature. It has often been asserted that brains do not generally accompany brawn. There are certainly many exceptions to any such statement, anyone must realize, but certain it is that this man's stature has in no way interfered with the success of his University career. We will remember him with a sense of personal attachment, and confidently await his elevation to a position of worth in the world of business.

PROBABLY Tom's chief interest during his University life has been athletics. To this field he has devoted a large part of his time, participating in varsity squad activities and various class athletics. Tom has been called upon often to aid in putting across various student activities in general, and in such a capacity has been found to be true and worthy of confidence.

Tom is well known and well liked by his classmates. Moreover, he is the sort of person who likes people in general and is, therefore, easy to establish friendly relations with. Thus he has probably enjoyed the fellowship of his classmates as much as any one of their number. He is a loyal member of the Charlotte contingent, every unit of which cites that city as the real place; certainly, the town has contributed students to the University who would represent well any section.

AMAN of absolute independence and charming individuality, Percy has acquired friends because he has not sought them; but to be his friend is a privilege. At ease in any company, a gentleman under all circumstances, and as generous as the day is long, he is a prince among good fellows.

Percy has a wide knowledge of life, and it amuses him. Give him his meerschaum and he will philosophize with you by the hour on any subject from bass-fishing to women, and when the discussion is over, especially if the subject has been women, he will shrug as he learned to do in France, and smile the smile that a kind fate has given him.

Some people think that Percy is lazy. He isn't. He just has an inordinate distaste for doing what he is supposed to do.

Percy is a thinker, but he doesn't obtrude his opinions on anyone, nor does he allow other people's views to disturb him; he seldom pays any attention to them. We don't know what your plans are, Percy, but we do know that you are very liable to succeed in them whatever they be, and here's wishing you the Best o' Luck.

INTRODUCING the "social" pride of Harnett County, one "Toofer", a pharmaceutical lad of high standing. Here, ladies and gentlemen, is a youth of many loves, but in this past year, strangely enough, he has settled down to the serious business of learning to mix and dispense drugs with (so rumor hath it) only one fair lady to hold his attention. It is said that she has held it with much completeness, and whenever Dunn's famous son returns to his home town it is not unlikely that he will sail upon the sea of matrimony.

Be that as it may, "Toofer" has served well at Carolina, and his good word for everybody and his attractive personality have made for him an unusual number of friends who will save his future business from bankruptcy, should he become so enamored as to grow careless with his more serious pursuits. But "Toofer" will succeed. He has success written all over him—success, the reward of a most genial disposition and a generous and kind-hearted manner.

IN spite of the somewhat dreamy aspect about his optics, this youth is not a member of the literati, nor does he court the muses of the more abstract arts, but he is some mathematician, which largely accounts for his favor in Dean Daggett's School of Electrical Engineering.

The School of Medicine and the School of Engineering are generally regarded by Liberal Arts students as good places for persons having a strange craving after labor and the habits of a hermit. But for all the rigor of curriculum in his school, "T.B." has found time to circulate among the members of his class, listen to Froneberger's jokes, and take a "Hobo" trip to Richmond on the eve of a V. M. I. game.

Terpsichore, says "T.B.," did not smile upon him, but nevertheless at the Annual Ball of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers he is always among those present.

While a good deal of an all-around man, his real record of achievement is in the field of electricity. HALES emerged from the well known County of Johnson, and you can tell by his expression he is glad of the fact. It is understood that he is contemplating another course of "Ology" under Dr. Billy. Hales is in hog heaven when it comes to making love to pretty girls, and falls like leaves in autumn for these fair ones. We know this young man will have a successful future in pharmacy.

SAMUEL CANNADY HALL

Age, 21; Height, 5 feet 8 inches; Weight, 140

Degree, Ph.G.; Life Work, Pharmacy

William Simpson Pharmaceutical Society; President Granville County Club; Class Football ('19).

SAM could not at first decide what profession to pursue, but his final decision brought him up Christmas of 1922, having faced E. V. Howell the previous year.

Like many great men, Sam's true value can in no way be compared to his physical size. Although he may be small, he has never been interested in the job that he did not finish to the very best of his ability and, of course, that means almost to perfection.

We all know that Oxford is a very attractive little city, but we can't quite understand just why he finds it necessary to pay that particular place a visit every week-end. But it must follow, as the night the day, every Friday afternoon finds him packing his "please don't rain", with a big smile on his face.

His fine ability to make friends has shown itself at the University during his College career, and we are sure that Sam will meet with the greatest of success in his life's work.

MARTHA LOZETTE HAMILTON
(Mrs. T. H.)

Chapel Hill, N. C.

Age, 22; Height, 5 feet 5 inches; Weight, 110

Degree, A.B.

Two years Heidelberg University; Major Study, English; Accompanist for Glee Club and Orchestra, 1921-'22, 1922, '23.

ALTHOUGH Mrs. Hamilton came to us in our Junior year from Ohio, she has most happily succeeded in combining the ability to adapt herself quickly to Carolina life with that of making for herself many friends. She is a good student, and in any task undertaken she knows no such word as failure. Her superabundance of energy finds expression in other fields, however, for she is an accomplished pianist, and her lovely voice is always a delight to those who hear her.

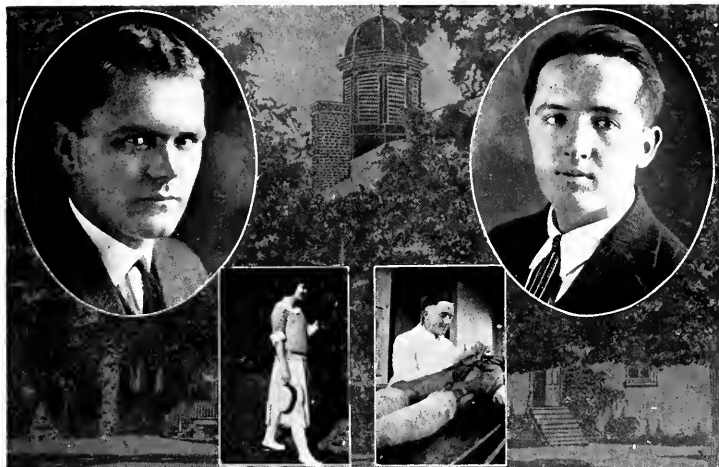

WILLIAM KNOWLTON HARDING
Charlotte, N. C.

Age, 22; Height, 5 feet 10½ inches; Weight, 144

Degree, B.S.; Life Work, Electrical Engineering

Di Society; Mecklenburg County Club; A. I. E. E., President, 1923; Theta Chi Fraternity; Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society; German Club.

BILL is the type of a person who could get along in any kind of a crowd anywhere. His personality appeals to all alike and his congenial disposition brands him a "good egg". "Bill" is preparing himself to be an electrical engineer, but he has not allowed this to prevent him from getting plenty out of life. He can wind a motor or make a generator, but he can't do this any better than he can manipulate a hand of bridge.

JOHN OBIE HARMON

Pittsboro, N. C.

Age, 27; Height, 5 feet 11 inches; Weight, 195

BIG STUFF, "Rock", "IronMan", or whatever else he's called, is a self-made man—and though we have roomed with him we say he made a good job of it. He's not the best in the world at all things, but he may be depended on to do a good piece of work at whatever he's about, whether it be instilling "fear of God and the Council" in the Student Body, or snoring—his "favorite indoor sport". He came to us from Uncle Sam's school for little boys.

Obie has done everything anyone could do at College, except study, and it is rumored that he has done a little of that. Active on the campus in everything that comes up, he has dabbled particularly in football, politics, French "3," and "Dean Moose's" school of (co-?) education—no, really, for "Rock" agrees with ye Editor that women have their place which is elsewhere than in a student's mind.

Springing a complete surprise on the campus, this puritan himself has shown a remarkable breadth of mind in dealing with others. For this trait the campus respects and admires its president, and ye Editor thanks him.

HERE'S another of the Little-Weaver-Harrell trio, and some say he is the best of the lot, although these three members of our Senior Med Class and some of their friends might want to fight it out to decide such a thing. Few people knew of Horace's home town until he came here, but more and more they are knowing that such a place exists, and his many friends in the medical class believe it is to keep on acquiring a reputation through the coming Dr. Harrell.

He is sometimes called "John"—just why, no one knows, but they do know why he dislikes oranges, and if there should be one so unfortunate as to lack this knowledge let him ask Harry Ditmore.

Horace studies his work at the med building first of all, but he always manages to take off enough time to visit L. R. Wilson's library and keep up with world affairs, and can discuss with equal knowledge on pathology, the League of Nations, Babe Ruth and Peggy O'Neal. Ask him and see. He's an all-round good man, not so bad-looking either, say the girls, and the kind of likable, jolly fellow it takes to make a good doctor. Watch him for another Dr. Mayo.

LUTHER THOMPSON HARTSELL

Di Society; Class of '22; Clarke Law Club; Vice-President Second Year Law Class, '22, '23; Student Editor North Carolina Law Review, '22, '23; German Club; Cabin.

Φ Δ Φ; Κ Σ.

LUTHER T. Hartsell, the sage of Concord and a future chief justice, or so at least it is whispered about Dean Lucius Polk McGhee's Law School where Luther pastimes with Blackstone and the far renowned "rule in Shelley's case."

Not satisfied with his already profound knowledge of the law, this campus Lord Coke intends to grace Roscoe Pound's Harvard Law School with his analytical mind next year. In fact, it looks as if he intends to pass the State Bar examination in spite of all Chief Justice Clark can do to the contrary notwithstanding.

While Luther has devoted the major portion of his time and energy to the pursuit of legal lore, nevertheless, he has a strong minor in social activities, and it is a strange Carolina dance that does not find Luther among those in attendance. With a tall figure and a dark Villiers countenance, he draws fair grades on the social course, also.

C. R., as his classmates choose to call him, is one of those "hardworking and ever-ready-to-do-a-favor" sort of boys. His motto is "Never put off anything for tomorrow that can be done today". And so has he stuck to it that medicine seems to hold no mysteries that he can't solve. Burning midnight oil is his long suit (?)—and that is the whole secret of Clyde's success. When it comes to the girls he's an unknown quantity, but it can be said with safety that he has about six or "one-in-every-port". Every day at mail time, Clyde can be seen hanging around his P. O. box—constantly watching, waiting, and praying for that rose-scented pink epistle from the "fairest of the fair," and usually it's there—"Aint it wonderful?"

It is said that aside from all this is his work, and surgery being his chief center of interest— if vim and "stickability" mean anything, then we're sure that "C. R." will in the future become one of the great surgeons of the day.

OLIN CARLTON HENDRIX

Age, 22; Height, 5 feet 10 inches; Weight, 155

Degree, A.B.; Life Work, Medicine

Dialectic Literary Society; Davie County Club; N. C. HENDRIX, or "O. C." as he is generally known by his classmates, may be singled out anywhere by his characteristic, good-natured laugh. You are forced to smile when you have approached him and listened to his line which is always novel enough to avoid monotony. Olin is a good mixer and well liked by all, co-eds not excepted. His popularity was demonstrated when he was nominated for business manager of this publication; his political skill when he was elected, and this annual speaks for his business ability. Hendrix always found time to mix with the fair sex. It is rumored that he is very fond of them, and this rumor seems to be justified when one hears him spoken of as "Chief Rooster of the Hen House".

In spite of his love affairs and campaigns, Hendrix is a good student. He has made good grades on his courses which range from Billy Noble's Education through Oliver Towles' French up to and including Froggy Wilson's Zoology. It is not known what his life work will be; however, he seems inclined toward the field of medicine and we know that he will succeed.

FRED JULIAN HERRON

Biltmore, N. C.

Age, 26; Height, 5 feet 11 inches; Weight, 158

Dialectic Society; North Carolina Club; Buncombe County Club; R. O. T. C. (1); Carolina Playmakers (1); Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society (4); A. E. F. Club; Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

FRED believes whole-heartedly in masculine supremacy. As anti-co-ed champion he was instrumental in keeping the Di Society free of femininity. But we hear that he doesn't practice what he preaches along this line.

The medical field is to Fred the "land of heart's delight". His leaning toward this line was accentuated by one year's service with the Naval Medical Department during the war, and his four years at Carolina have not curbed his restless disposition. Fred has traveled over the road of adversity in accomplishing his longing. Most of us seek our aim first and our domestic bliss last. He reversed this order and sought domestic bliss first. May there always be domestic bliss in his home. We feel confident that the medical profession will attain no warmer advocate nor respected member when Frederick writes M.D. after his name.

Epitaph: "Let me live by the side of the road and be a friend to man."

JACOB FRANK HIGHSMITH

Degree, A.B.; Life Work, Medicine

Cabin; German Club; Cumberland County Club.

K A.

THIS is one of the future representatives which the Class of 1923 will contribute to the field of medicine. Frank came to the University with the intention of becoming an accredited and worthy Alumni of the institution. He is worthy and has been so since the beginning; at one time he doubted a little the value of an A.B. course when applied to the real problems of life itself. Every student in this college undergoes the same experience; the value of the course itself is exemplified in the final decision of most of them, Frank included, that it has a distinct broadening and deepening influence.

In his Junior year Frank succumbed to the lure of medicine, a profession which has attracted several members of his family. From that time he entered into the preparation for his chosen profession with zest. Throughout he has not allowed business to consume all of his time, but has taken an active interest in the social events which have taken place.

AS THE whale swallowed Jonah, "Skinny" has finally succeeded in passing his French courses although the effort left a bad taste in his mouth. The perseverance with which he stuck to this job proves to his classmates that "Skinny" will be capable of mastering the hard problems which he will encounter in the future. He has been looking forward with eagerness to the time when Mrs. Eubank's Cottage, Chapel Hill, N. C., will no longer be his address, and has been dreaming of that event of events which we are expecting will occur in the not-far-distant future in the City-by-the-Sea. We don't know the other party, but our best wishes are for both. Quiet, unassuming, competent, and the kind of fellow that the Class of 1923 is proud to call one of its own.

DICK came to us as a Freshman in '18. He was then quiet, pleasant and unassuming, and still retains these characteristics. This may partly be an explanation of his wonderful personality. Everybody likes "Dick"—and it is rumored that one of the fairer sex likes him best of all. He gets daily letters from her and reads them with a thoroughness characteristic of his study of Dr. Bullitt's Pathology.

Not only a good fellow, "Dick" is a good student and has shown this in his two years in medicine here. From his acquired knowledge of physiological chemistry he has decided that a "diet of cabbage" is necessary to reduce flesh, but his many friends would suggest that he take more exercise. As to his future we have no doubt. It makes no difference where "Dick" goes for his last two years nor what branch of medicine he decides to follow, nor where he settles, we know that he will be an honor to the medical profession and a man of whom we will all be proud.

CHICK came to the University after a successful prep school career at Augusta Military Academy. Thus, when he entered he had acquired habits of study and living which have resulted in his University career's being above reproach in every respect. He has been a good citizen of this campus. "Chick's" classroom work has won for him high honors in scholarship, while his interest in lighter athletic activities and in the affairs of the social realm have given him contact with other phases of student life. A well-rounded college life has been the lot of the subject of this sketch, and he has, moreover, proven himself a leader in the various activities. He carries with him upon his departure from the University the esteem and friendship of his classmates.

LEWIS JASON HOLLOMAN

Degree, Ph.G.; Life Work, Pharmacist

Member Campus Cabinet; Masonic Club; William Pharmaceutical Society; A. E. F. Club; Trinity Park Club. K Ψ.

HOLLOMAN, hailing from Harrellsville, finished his prep school training at Trinity Park in '18. Longing for excitement he spent the next two years in Uncle Sam's army, spending twelve months of his time in or among the Germans. Coming back to the States in the Summer of '19, he entered college in Atlanta and came to Carolina one year later. A truer friend or a better pal than "Cicero" is seldom found. He is possessed of that rare combination of personality which has gained for him the respect and friendship of many people at Carolina. He is a lively, congenial fellow, always ready to hear or pull a good joke. "Cicero" always appears neat and dressy; never fails to vamp the ladies. A friend to everybody, a good student in college, he is sure to be a success in his profession and a leader in pharmacy.

G. M. HONEYCUTT (Gilbert Mansfield)

Chapel Hill, N. C.

Age, 20; Height, 5 feet 11 inches; Weight, 175

Degree, B.S. Commerce; Life Work, Retailing

Class Football (2, 3, 4); R. O. T. C. (1, 2); Orange County Club; Durham County Club; Le Cercle Francais.

THIS lad of local residence had the inspiration and followed it to a complete and, some would say, rollicking finish; viz. to get married. He entered Carolina a man of single blessedness and he leaves Carolina a man of double blessedness (?). For "Honey" has espoused the "Chief's" daughter for comfort in his final year and with whom to enter on the stormy seas of the cruel, cruel world.

"Honey", however, has not confined his activities to the matrimonial line, for at the ancient and royal game of pitching horseshoes he is a master "par excellence". He is said to have stepped into the shoes of the famed "Hoke" Martin of yore. He pitches horseshoes from morn' till night on occasions.

So we will have to, taking all the facts into consideration, hand it to this lad that he is literally the "stuff", and a blamed good sport; what we would call an all-around athlete in several fields. We cannot but see him in the future as the patron saint of an institution for the education of intelligent blacksmiths.

THOMAS RUFFIN HOOD

THERE came here a dark youth from Dunn, which calls itself the largest town for its size in the State. He enrolled in the Pharmacy School and as the youngest member of his class he went to work quietly and sedately. Pretty soon it was known that he was here—"Tom" Hood future member of the distinguished firm of Hood & Grantham, established in 1891, one of Dunn's oldest and best-known business institutions. "Tom" is a born pharmacist and has mastered his studies with ease, acquiring grades of a gentleman, and finding time on the side to write a certain young lady who winters in Greensboro, to spend a goodly part of each day at the Pi Kappa Alpha hall in a session, and to work actively on committees in campus activities. "Tom" has a clean sheet to leave behind him in college, which promises for him a happy and successful business career. It is rumored among his friends that he is very anxious to become old enough to stand the examination for his pharmacy license, for some say that he is so greatly attached to the person to whom he writes so religiously, that no one knows what may embark on the matrimonial sea at any time.

COUNTRY" first gained fame as a disciple of Kent Brown. This brands him as a student of no mean ability. One would never suspect this quiet citizen from Pink Hill of delving in the realms of love were it not for his frantic use of bare-to-hair, and the fragrant envelopes that he draws from the old box daily. Ever since he first chopped on Froggy's frogs he's been getting more scientific and dignified every day in every way.

"Country" lost his snitese just before Christmas but his scientific knowledge was turned into a Sherlock Holmes stunt and the missing article was at last recovered.

To show him and everyone else how much his med class thinks of him, it elected him as representative on the Student Council. "Country's" smiling disposition and earnest work will mean success, no matter what branch of his profession he enters. We rather suspect that he will specialize in the ailments of the fair sex.

THOMAS SIMMONS HOWARD

TO THIS gentleman, those who may derive profit and pleasure from the perusal of this Annual owe a distinct debt of gratitude, for he it is who has contributed the largest amount of time and real labor to its compilation and arrangement. However, arduous labor is no stranger to Tom, as he has proven himself throughout one of the most consistent workers in our class.

This fact has not prevented our subject from firmly establishing himself in the hearts of many of his classmates; a power that is inherent within him because he is affable, sincere and tolerant. Moreover, Tom possesses a great deal of fortitude and determination; a fact well proven by the manner in which he has carried through the most difficult task confronting any student-officer—that of editing the YACKETY YACK. His classmates are fond of him, have confidence in him, and expect only the best results to come from his future activities.

Degree, B.S.; Life Work, Electrical Engineering

BARNEY EDISON HUMPHREY had rambled about a goodly portion of the terrestrial sphere before he rambled into Tommie J.'s office and matriculated as a Freshman scheduled to graduate in 1923.

Since his teens he has held a license as a first-class wireless operator and in that capacity has visited almost every port in the world with some ship or other.

He has done good work for four years with the Electrical Engineering Department, and goes out into the more serious business of life with a desire to emulate his famous namesake in achievements in the electrical world.

"Ed." has restricted himself almost entirely to his studies, but his quiet manner and ready smile have made him very much a favorite with fellow members of the Class of 1923.

He has but one consuming passion, and that is electricity. Anything connected with direct or alternating currents holds his attention. So, when he enters into his profession of electrical engineering, he will not be one of the far famed "round pegs in a square hole".

T K A.

E. C. must have either a mighty intellect or a "good line," for he studies only when he is not eating, sleeping, or writing up fines at the library, but he gets there just the same. "Fresh" from Lexington he developed a great ambition to some day preside over that august body, the Di Society. As a mark of his success and service in the society he was so honored, and during the first quarter of the year "E. C." filled (literally) with dignity the president's chair. Contrary to the American custom of bestowing titles of honor, "E. C." has recently been dubbed Sir John. And although he presents an exceedingly youthful appearance he actually has a philosophy of life which may best be obtained from observation.

It has been said that "E. C." wears almost a divine expression on his face—when asleep, and it is a well-known fact that the minister's goodly dame was once heard to remark on perceiving this innocent Freshman youth asleep in church, "Isn't he cute?" With all his youthful qualities, "E. C." is a good egg and one of the fellows.

FRANK, known by his friends at the University as "Pat", and by the people of Warrenton as Doctor Hunter, came to the University during the days of the S. A. T. C. Since that time he has been preparing himself for a place among the followers of Hippocrates.

Due to his original work in microscopic investigation, and invaluable contributions to his co-workers, they out of respect and gratitude bestowed upon him "A Degree".

This progress, though great, has not astonished us; in fact, we would have been surprised had not something of this kind occurred when we remember his wonderful accounts of Warrenton and its inhabitants.

Loyal, sincere, faithful, he moves among his fellows in his quiet, unassuming way. We who are his friends are fortunate in that friendship.

Somewhere, either at Warrenton or in some other town, they need a fine physician. "Pat" will take the job, and fill it, as well as he has carried on his work at Carolina.

BEHOLD! The Guardian Angel of Swine's portly gates. The everlasting, eternal terror of the late sleeper, the end of the famous 8:30 track meet. Everyone knows him and everyone believes that he will make, if nothing else, a good guard. He's going into the cotton mill business and if he guards his interests there as well as he has repulsed assaults on aforesaid portals he will come out swimmingly.

Huss has been able to study his course and carry on his own fight for self-sustenance at the same time. He's a peculiar kind of bird, too. He has an overcoat, but not to use, and quite often he has been seen treading the campus walks in shirt sleeves with the wind howling and with other men wrapped in sweaters and heavy mackinaws. He never gets cold; he's hard. We suggest that he open a cotton mill in Alaska if he can get the natives to grow the cotton.

But Hunter is a real Southern gentleman, too. He is always busy, especially on Saturdays as he himself will admit, and these Northern capitalists who want cotton investments in the South, will some day have to reckon with him.

TO THE majority of the Class of '23, Claude is a quiet, unassuming good fellow. His most intimate friends know him as a jovial good comrade. There are some who are surprised to find that he is a member of '23. That is because Claude entered with the Class of '20. The war called him to France, and upon his return to civilian life he taught school for a couple of years. Back to U. N. C. in 1921 he came for "business only". He heeded strictly the voice of duty—

"Duty, stern daughter of the voice of God". Claude is above the average in scholarship, intellectual equipment, and sober judgment. Withal, his cheerful disposition is a friend-winner everywhere. It cannot be denied that Claude has as wide experience of life as any in the class. It is not thought that he is worrying over the proposed tax on bachelors. Luck to you, Claude!

E. C. is one of those fellows we all admire. In the Phi Assembly Hall he is a debater and an orator of no mean ability; on the tennis court he is in the height of his athletic glory; in his room he is a good student; and on the campus he is a "good egg". All these things combined in "E. C." make him a real Carolina Man. His class showed its appreciation for what he has done by electing him class treasurer in his Senior year. We believe "E. C." is sincere in his actions. In his Freshman year he affiliated himself with the local Baptist Church, proving to us that he means well in life. Honest, straightforward, persevering, and naively energetic, we predict a successful career for him. But just one bit of advice: when it comes to the ladies, "discretion is the better part of valor".

JOHNNIE Johnson first saw the light in the thriving little metropolis of Wallace, N. C. After attaining a moderate degree of wisdom in that city he decided to cast his lot with the University and entered with the Class of 1923.

"Johnnie" is always ready to greet you with a joyful smile, and this, plus his businesslike way of carrying on his accepted tasks to a successful conclusion, has made him quite an outstanding figure on the campus. Although a good student he is at the same time a great admirer of the fair ones. His one distinctive characteristic is congeniality.

Always accompanying this we find a frank and sincere demeanor. His many friends here regret to part company with him. However, they are somewhat consoled in their loss by thinking of the credit which will redound to his former companions when "Johnnie" solves the mysteries of the universe.

KELLY soon gained a reputation among us as a hard worker, and has spent most of his time living up to it. He eats and sleeps only when he's nothing else to do. In spite of his ardent pursuit of knowledge he has let us know him and we are glad he has.

Although it is not known as a certain fact, it is believed that Kelly holds the world dumping record, if not in the world, certainly in the University of North Carolina. He spent three long, busy years rooming with Bob Felton in 13 Old West and trying to keep that slim individual under his wing at the same time he was pursuing his studies in chemistry, zoology, and the arts of waking himself up at midnight by a jaunt to various rooms of unsuspecting Freshmen around the campus. This may be true, and it may not. If you want to know for sure, just ask him.

His splendid attitude toward his medical work is backed by personality and the combination means success. We know very little of his past—he is really very retiring—but we are confident of his future.

THE most applicable word in the English language for this young man is sincerity. Quiet, straightforward, cordial, he has won a host of lifelong friends in his four years' stay at the University. Jim has proved to us that there can be more than one "big" man in any family. He has run his Brother John, of the Class of '21, a close race in honors. Whenever any real big thing is to be done, when any big idea is to be instituted, even when any political scheme is to be "pulled", Jim is one of the first men to be sought. But unless the movement is absolutely clean and unquestionable you needn't ask him to help you put it through. For the very reason that most of politics is questionable, accounts for the fact that Jim was not more successful in that line. With him truth and morality are first. In a word, Jim's a fine fellow. We all like him.

Secretary and Treasurer, Rowan County Club, '22; President, Rowan County Club, '23.

THIS tall and sprightly lad hails from Salisbury, chiefly famed for its proximity to Spencer and the scene of railroad strikes.

In the early days of his College career he had a comrade extraordinary in the person of one Bill Harris, the two being as inseparable as a pair of setter pups. Bill, however, found the stress and strain of an academic existence too much, and dropped out to gather in the shekels.

Throughout his College career, "Kes" has been noted for the tenacity with which he clings to certain habits. For instance, he is a regular Dominica hen when it comes to retiring when the sun goes down and arising when it comes up, thereby causing considerable merriment among his comrades and much annoyance from the alarm clock.

"Kes" has been known to study when hard pressed, but generally speaking he seems to be one of those rare individuals endowed with the ability to pass courses without "putting out".

However, be that as it may, here he is a graduate of the University and a well-liked member of the Class of 1923.

RED" came to us from our capitol city with a record behind him, gained both at home and abroad. After a certain Summer jaunt across the Atlantic, when he was associated very closely with cows, he landed at Liverpool during those unfortunate days of two years ago when an Irish head of hair was a burr to English eyes; result, he was immediately interned. Immensely tickled with the idea of being mistaken for an "auld countryman" he's done his best to live up to the reputation ever since. Call to witness certain Carr Freshmen of two years ago as to the success he attained. Squelched for a while by the great five of the campus he burst into full bloom amongst us a year ago and has been a successful edition ever since. His one unfortunate trait besides being too warm-hearted is a tendency to sleep not betimes but any old time even in the middle of a pathology lecture. We'll take a bet, though, he'll leave a trail of glory behind him in his chosen profession of medicine.

"Pike" Trotter knows him perhaps better than any other man on the campus, and if you don't believe what we say about him and want to know anything, either good or bad, ask that brilliant young lawyer.

IF IT'S a political frame-up, or a bridge game, or a friendly bull-session, Rufus is always there to take an active part, but he is also there when the midnight oil is burning over some intricate problem in the calculus or engineering, and if one sees him at these times they understand the presence of the Φ B K key that he carries.

He is reported to be supreme ruler in the Freshman E. E. Lab and a treasurer to the "King". His classmates still remember one wintry February afternoon when he was "elected" to take current measurements in Morgan's Creek. As a member of the "Book Exchange" force, he has developed business ability. This is demonstrated by the ease with which he is able to figure a family budget. With his frequent visits to Mocksville, we wonder how soon he will cease to be a member of the Bachelors' Club.

Aggressive and ingenious, we predict a great future for him in engineering or any line of work he may enter.

E"VE" is an example of modesty. Seldom do we find a man more reserved, more neat in his appearance, or more careful in his manner. He has long since been a victim of Cupid's dart, but no matter where he is his winning smile always attracts them, but he is just as clever with his work as he is with his habits, and is always sure to rank with those who register in the safety zone.

"Sid" was originally a member of the Class of '22, but fate so decreed that he "drop out" a year, which decree he willingly admits results in his membership in Carolina's Greatest Class. "Sid" is one of those fellows who has a vision in life. That vision is to serve his fellow man. This is what brought him back to the University—to equip himself for service. Forgetting the absence of his former classmates, "Sid" has made a host of friends on the campus in his final year. Possessing a great power of concentration, punch, and perseverance, he is a good student, and a good citizen. With goal set high and these sterling qualities, what's the use of wishing him success?

HERE is a journalist with ideals. Wright has decided not to be a reporter, but a real journalist. And he is preparing himself for such a career. During his four years here he has not "gratted" a class. Besides his classroom work he has done a volume of praiseworthy work for the College publications.

But even with this, Wright is not taking things too seriously. He finds time to mix and have a good time with the rest of the crowd. He also finds time to keep matters right somewhere out in the State, judging from the steady succession of petit pink letters which he receives and peruses with intense interest.

One of those fellows who never seem to be serious, yet serious enough when the occasion demands, Walker has made many friends; he is a sure cure for the blues. It is said that he is in love; at least, the life-size picture would indicate that his amorous affairs are not nil. Socially and economically he is there, for on the dance floor or in the accounting lab he is equally accomplished. AFTER years of habitation among the sand hills of Eastern Carolina, "Bill" took a step forward into civilization to show the women what life yet had in store for them. The expression "You mighty roight, big boy", gave "Bill" away to the neck of the woods from which he emerged—that historical spot called Manteo. He landed at the University to enlighten himself not along historical lines but along the up-and-down path of medicine.

"Bill" is getting away with a good start and already another "doc" has begun to take up his practice in Durham, but as "Bill" always would do, he came back to his "red-headed baby" on the shores of East Carolina where medicine is lost in the joys of a perfect love. Since "Bill's" debut into civilization he has made many friends. He is known by girls from Murphy to Manteo. Mostly at Manteo. Even among old politicians "Bill" is always remembered; young in looks yet old in ideas. Although he sometimes overpowers the consciousness of duty, he has the ability, character, and wit to mold into the making of a promising physician. We are all looking at you "big boy", so "stick in there and foight".

GRADY'S stay at Carolina has not been characterized by conspicuousness but rather by solid and constructive labor in several fields of endeavor. He has made many lasting friendships here, and his genial smile can always be counted on to inspire confidence in those with whom his work lies.

Grady, believing that work went best when well flavored with that concoction in which Cupid dips his darts, early in his College career bared his breast to Cupid's arrows and became a confirmed believer in its power. McCauley Street will indeed be without a master when this devotee of love departs from Carolina.

Although Grady is an enthusiastic chemist he fain would not devote his life's labor to this line. He prefers delving into the unknowns of the human mind and heart rather than those of the scientific world.

We believe that a future of solid accomplishments awaits him. The future has nothing of which to complain if the past and present are to be taken as criterions.

MURRAY is the third "Link" of a chain that dates back to 1914 when the well-known J. Burton entered. He entered the University in 1919 and seems to have taken electrical engineering only for pastime and amusement. For at the beginning of his Junior year he decided that door bell engineering was not the thing for him and changed to the broader field of liberal arts. Working under difficulties as an A.B. student, he has made a splendid record and is an honor-roll man. He has, we believe, been too liberal with the midnight oil. But as a result of this he has developed into a good track man, getting to Swain Hall for breakfast after sleeping until the last minute. He believes in, "do it or bust", "stay in there and fight", and he does not give up until it is all over. Only when he has done his best is he satisfied. His "line" is good to interest anyone and should be a great help towards his success. Today he does not know what game of life he is going to play. However, we believe this—the game he does enter will get the best he possesses—clean, strong manhood.

Why, he even gave up a promising athletic career in order to apply himself more vigorously to his studies, and the results were simply wonderful. We don't know where he is going to pursue his M.D. nor how far in the future it will be before fame sounds the praise of his research, but soon or late, come it must. And, having finished his medical course, where will he locate? In Charlotte or New York, or some metropolis? LONNIE is following in the steps of an older brother toward the medical profession and is following well. In the first place we know he'll make good, for he has always made good at everything else he has tried. He made the best of his opportunities in high school, and here, with a unified med class in spirit, he has been one of those on top in his class of work.

He's a long, tall, likable individual with a family of brothers and sisters, and a community and a girl waiting for him to finish and come back to them, and we know he's going. Lonnie is too much of a home lover to leave it, and his own people need him and want him. Here, if it's a long, interesting session in his study, or a quick, hard walk for exercise before lunch, or in the class-room or laboratory dealing with those long, difficult medical terms and questions, he's the same Lonnie and you like him at them all.

He belongs to that happy and inseparable trio, Little, Weaver, and Harrell, who have come from elementary French and chemistry "1" to their last year under the grind of second year med in such a manner as to make their friends proud of them.

On the athletic field he has the record of playing class football, basketball, and baseball, but he is no Pharisee; he does things without shouting his own praise. All in his class know him as a true, honest, likable friend and one who possesses no small amount of dry humor. THIS rather dignified man is our ideal of the typical Southern gentleman; when we say dignified we don't mean it to be interpreted too strictly, for he hasn't dignity carried to the point that it is a bore. On the contrary, he is interesting to talk with on any subject you may bring up.

"Zack" has that enthusiasm to see a thing to the end equally as much in his studies as anything else. To hear him read French and German, one would think that he was preparing to teach, but he has selected medicine as his profession and we look for sickness to disappear after he learns the art of doctoring. He hasn't ability only along the line of work, as you would agree if you saw him on the tennis court, wielding a wicked racquet. We would advise many of these champions to look out for their laurels.

MAC", or "Sput-um", came to us from Randolph-Macon College well prepared to enter upon the study of his chosen profession. This has been shown by his two years of medicine here. In addition to being a hard, consistent worker he is popular not only with the men of his class but with everyone who knows him. He has a ready ability for handling practical matters and is fortunate in that he picked a profession for which he has an intense love.

We don't know whether it is due to his good looks or what it is, but it is reported that the "fairer sex" is very anxious about him. That is one thing we want "Mac" to watch. This boy is unassuming, but jolly all the time. A "trick" on one of his friends is his delight. We don't know where he is going for his last two years, what branch of medicine he is going into, nor where he will locate, but we do believe that some day the profession will be proud of him.

"Mac" is one of those fellows who takes college life more or less seriously. You can drop by New West any time and find him studying; but he is never too busy to stop and "bull" with you. As a student of economics, "Mac" has to be reckoned with; and accounting, the horror of the School of Commerce, meant little to him, but his downfall was Monsieur Staab. WHEN the village curate heard his guardians renounce for this son of Scotland Neck, the world, the flesh, and the devil, he called him Archibald McDowell, Jr.

And "Archie" he remained until he early came to Chapel Hill where his classmates refused to saddle him with the favorite Scotch first name, and instead substituted "Chauncy" and "Jack".

"Chauncy" has become known hereabouts as one of the most likable and best-humored individuals that ever came to Harry Chase's school. The best proof in the world of this good naturedness is the fact that he took for one quarter and passed physics without once losing his equanimity or getting into a grouch. In fact, he absolutely refuses to get on a grouch.

He has made a rare bridge partner for "Fantorts" Cooper, and bet against "Chick" Holder-ness on almost every event—athletic or otherwise.

"Jack" aspires to become a captain of industry in the textile field, and with his infinite capacity for smiling when "everything goes dead wrong", it does not seem feasible that such trifles as broken threads and labor troubles will deter him guerdon of success.

And he has been instrumental in bringing about good results whenever associated in any such endeavors.

Those men who were parties to the recent defeat of the Central Allies upon the famous European battlefields do not like to recount their experiences. We are slipping one over on Alan when we say that a statement of the truth would result in displaying him to the world as one of the youngest captains in the American forces engaged. He has the stuff in him from which true fighters are made and he will assert himself wherever he chooses to locate.

FROM Gastonia, famed for textiles and baseball teams, comes "Mac" who started out his first year as an enthusiastic member of the Freshmen Debating Society. He soon abandoned the forensic art, however, to pass time on Coach Bob Fetzer's cinder path, where he has been a valuable member of the squad during several seasons, but on account of various kinds of hard luck has failed to win the letter.

Although a student of parts, "Mac" is very skeptical about the necessity of the modern language requirement for a degree in the school of liberal arts.

Next year he will go to fair Harvard to enter upon the study of law, and with his gift of "gah" and analytical mind and legal cast of countenance, it is evident that the spirits of Webster, Coke and Blackstone have marked him for an illustrious disciple of their tenets.

The class sends him on his way with its blessings, knowing that he will learn the law and hoping that he learns the tongue of Madame de Stael.

IF YOU want to ask any question about history or the History Department, just ask Elizabeth. She can tell you. Also, if you are interested in that all-illusive future—and who doesn't want to know how many times one will wed or a Dark Stranger enter one's life to bring travels abroad and riches?—I say, if you are interested she can tell you the most optimistically true (?) fortune any black-eyed gypsy ever dared tell. Does she flirt while she reads your palm, boys, at those co-ed Hallow'een parties, etc? You ought to know. But she doesn't tell us co-eds. All we know is: she has young men friends to Sunday dinner. But Elizabeth is O. K. We like her and are glad to meet her friends—particularly the masculine.

CARL spent his Freshman year at the University of Virginia, but being a North Carolinian could not resist the lure to finish up at Carolina and give her the benefit of his athletic prowess, especially in the line of basketball.

He has played on the Carolina Varsity for two years, having been a member of the quint which captured Southern honors in basketball in '22, and star guard on the Varsity of '23 which again came near to taking the Southern measure. Carolina supporters always felt secure of Mahler's guarding, and always were sure to see him toss the ball through the basket when the chance was given.

Carl is rated as one of Carolina's most popular athletes and bids well to stand high among the galaxy of athletes his home town has sent to Carolina in the past.

If he succeeds in life as he has succeeded in making his way to the hearts of Carolina men we are certain that his future success is assured.

"ICY" has probably enjoyed his four years in the University as much as has any member of the Senior Class. He has a natural taste for dancing and social expression in general. This fact, along with his ability to accomplish well those things which he undertakes, has enabled him to assert himself in the position of a leader in this phase of student life. One would not accuse him of being predominantly interested in pleasure-seeking, however, as that is not true.

In fact, "Icy" can be depended upon to exercise sound judgment and fairness in handling any problem which may confront him. He was instrumental in causing the members of the German Club to take a step last year which has been characterized by some as the most noteworthy achievement of the dancing element of the Student Body in years—the institution of the pledge system at the dances. "Icy" is well liked by his fellow students.

TO LOOK at "C. I." you wouldn't think him any thing more than a boy, but to come in contact with him you immediately find that he has, indeed, "put away childish things". "C. I." is a sunbeam on a cloudy day; he dispels darkness wherever he goes. Jovial and sincere he has won a lasting place within our hearts. We can expect nothing but success for him; a man who has such a desire for an education and the courage to come here and work that he may continue to pursue knowledge is bound to succeed. He has gone out for few College activities, but this in no way means that he has not caught the College spirit. Quite the contrary. Such as he is what keeps the University going. "C. I." is intending to teach school next year. All we can say is that the youth of North Carolina will be the better by it and the name of Carolina will be the more famous. We need wish him only happiness.

MAUNEY comes from Maiden, and Maiden did well to send him here just as Mocksville did well to send his pal Rufus Koontz here, too. And Rufus is not the only one who runs in the engineering gang who reads nice novels for an education and studies E. E. for a profession. There are several things distinctive about Mauney, his ability to sleep well being among them and his knowledge of literature being another.

His activities have been varied, running from a seat in the hall of the noble Di Society to one in that group of dignified Faculty and student organization of distinguished scientists—the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society. He's a good engineer and a good physicist, for he served his University right nobly as an assistant in the physics under Otto, and you know what that means, or if you don't you ought to. Mauney is good in his classroom or laboratory, and his classmates and professors like him there, but he is better in a session where his friends like him best. He may go to Westinghouse, or Southern Power, or to assist Mr. Birch—no matter where he goes, someone will get a good man.

REGGIE is famous for several things, among which was his friendship for an illustrious youth back several years ago who was known to the campus by the name of "Fats" Heath. "Fats" is also known at other places, possibly at Sing Sing and Scotland Yard, but under different names. But that does not detract from "Reggie's" own good name. He likes and is liked by the Lenoir and Statesville boys, and he couldn't help, any more than anyone else could, that Mr. Heath was from Statesville, too.

There are several things "Reggie" can always be counted on to do. He knows his stuff in engineering first of all, and that's the main thing, for he wants to be a big engineer and will possibly take Frank Page's job when North Carolina goes to building hard surfaced roads out to Podunk and Frog's Hollow. Then "Reggie" can tell you all about every athlete in the State and Country. He is a close follower of sports and will probably own a great hunting lodge in Canada one of these days. Another thing, he's what we call a good fellow, the kind of man everyone likes, a good mixer, if you will. He's a nice-looking chap, too, at least the girls say so. Anyway, we believe "Reggie" will make good in spite of what the girls think.

JOHNNY is a well-known campus character for many reasons. First, he belongs to a club of distinguished gentleman including such celebrities as "Pike" Trotter, Froneberger, "Red" Kimbrough, and "Sock" Procter. But in spite of this he has been able to maintain his reputation and enter successfully into the study of medicine. Anyone who can do that at Carolina is all to the "merry merry" so far as studies are concerned, and anyone who can do as well as John does down at that awful building can make good when he leaves it.

Mendenhall has done almost everything possible for a student to do here, including making the aforementioned organization, adding the charm of his voice to the Glee Club, and playing the part of a perfectly charming little flapper in one of Prof. Hamilton's creations. That's the most characteristic thing about John—his ability to do many things and do them well, to make student friends, musical friends, and all other kinds, for his thoroughness in anything he does.

LOWRY joined us after seeking the Goddess of Wisdom three years at Erskine. He must have had a strong desire for the University, for we understand that he sacrificed quite a few campus honors at his original Alma Mater to come here.

Although Lowry is a newcomer among us, we have a difficulty in realizing it, for his congenial disposition and ability to make friends at once made him a place among us. Lowry is a good all-round student, but strangely (?) is not in love with French and German. He is especially fond of studying human nature, and from what we have seen of him he has not wasted any time in this pursuit.

For his life work, Lowry has chosen the field of medicine, and he has done this with a genuine desire to be of service to humanity. We know he will.

Friendly and good hearted, "Bus" has improved more than any other member of his class since coming to Carolina. He had fought a good fight and now comes out one of the most popular members of his class. A friend to and of everybody—his sincere and kindly disposition has made him scores of friends who will remember him as one of the most delightful and worth while of their College chums. He is not exactly satisfied with his course, and is therefore planning to return next year for a Ph. D. degree.

THE group of verdant Freshmen, who in the Fall of 1919 assembled in the Di Society Hall and formed the Freshmen Debating Society for the year, will always remember "Mitch" by the fervent appeals he was wont to make to that body in meeting assembled.

And throughout his College career his interest has been all for two things—his work, and the Di Society pow-wows. In this connection it might be observed that he has represented his society in several forensic frictions with the Phi, and always to the credit of himself and the society of Zeb Vance.

Although generally maintaining a reputation for seriousness of purpose and strict application to his academic duties, "W. C." has bestirred himself in the activities of the class, and there is not a man in it who has given better service in time of need.

When his A.B. is safely appended, he will take up the study of law with the view of passing the State Board and entering upon active practice.

With his steadfastness of purpose, gift of application and forensic ability, the harbor of success will surely be his haven.

ADARK, handsome gentleman is "Bill", popular with his group of friends here in the engineering department, at Mary Ann, and in South, he has only brought with him from the "best town in North Carolina" the qualities which make him so popular there. Around the Statesville Drugstore "Bill" is one of the boys; around the campus he is one of the boys; and in the classroom he is one of the best engineering students in a group made up of brilliant seekers for knowledge such as Koontz, Smith, Lake, and the others.

Moore came to us from Davidson where he liked things fine, but couldn't find the preparation for what he believes he is called to do—become an expert electrical engineer. "Bill" is a modest sort of chap, too, the only time he ever forgot it was when he grew a tiny black mustache, but finding it looked too much like another one or two on the campus he promptly visited the barber shop, and he's been the same good scout ever since. "Bill" has done well in a difficult department. The world offers something to his kind, and he's sure to find it.

AVERNON CASTLE on the ballroom floor; a "Casey at the Bat" on the baseball diamond; a demon halfback on the football field; and a "Bull" in rural economics is a very fair epitome of Fred Morris' College existence.

During three years he has been one of the mainstays of the football and baseball team—a runner of interference par excellence and a pinch-hitter with no superior.

Fred, as has hereinbefore been hinted, has also been somewhat of a social lion, and when he was missed at a "hop", it was known that the football or baseball team was off on a trip.

He has already entered upon a career as a professional baseball player, having signed to play with Rochester, and with his ability to hold down the hot corner and deliver the base hits when needed even the wisecracks among sport writers agree that "he will go up".

CASEY is another one of the stellar athletes for which our class is noted. Probably we have the largest group of tremendously versatile athletes in this class that any class can boast of to date. "Casey" was elected captain of baseball at the end of his Junior year, and during the past Fall, when the football season closed, he was again promoted to the captaincy of one of the major sports.

From the beginning, every student has known "Casey" Morris, and many are the cheers that have floated across Emerson Field as outbursts of the crowded bleachers when "Casey" staged an outstanding feat. "Casey" is a good fellow and is one of the "heroes" of the campus. Personally, he is quiet and distinctly modest about it all.

Mildred is one of those rare persons who are blessed with the happy faculty of being intellectual without continually reminding us of the fact. She knocks Johnnie Booker cold with the answers she gives him on his English Class.

HE believes in the supremacy of the mountain man, both mentally and physically. Nature has bestowed upon him the gift of wielding the mighty pen, and he has done so with credit both to himself and his mountain land.

He revels in originality, even daring to face the William's crossfire philosophy without qualm.

Battle Park is his favorite haunt in seeking communion with Mother Nature, to whom he is an ardent devotee.

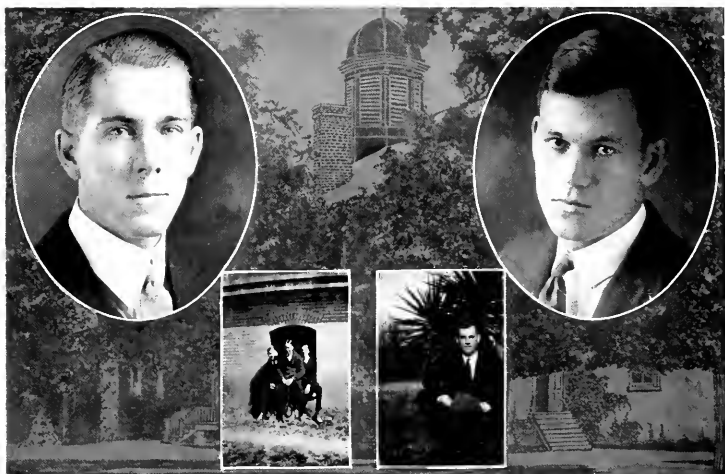

Having trodden the soil of sunny France and vales of misty Switzerland in his country's service at a time when many men were continuing their education he entered Carolina under some handicap, but by diligent application these handicaps disappeared even as the morning mists.

He believes in merit rather than politics as the cure of all campus evils of a political nature. However tempting the political field may have appeared to this admirer of Zebulon Baid Vance, he scorned them, lest they bear the taint of politics. His Eldorado in the future is to be mayor, newspaper editor, teacher, farmer, and philosopher in his own wigwam.

IN THE words of a poet: "Here be our Deacon",—a staunch and steady friend. As society president he can't be beaten, and he's for you until the end. Zounds! Zowie! what manner of man is this? No—not an apostle of Venus nor a slave to Bacchus—but an honest-to-goodness embryonic physician. And he's "all there" when it comes to observing technique, 'cause he does it according to Dr. Tefany. Some old day he'll probably be a great surgeon with a bevy of keen nurses and everything. Just watch him go. Hitch your wagon to a star (or even to the "Carboro Limited") is his motto.

"Deacon", as his chums prefer to call him, is quite an ardent "woo-er", and many a lass has fallen for those mystic wiles and dimpled smiles of his, but alas—he has went—a female person has "wamped" him and each and every day does he get said pink letter, Perfumed—! Oh! sweet essence of catnip! And you should see that boy go! Maybe he'll get over it and maybe he won't. Anyhow, where there's a will, there's a way, and as a prediction—Dr. Overcash, B.S.M.D., will lecture on Medical Ethics at——. May he live up to this.

ALTHOUGH he comes from sunny Florida, Parcell is Carolina's own. He entered the University in 1918, was out part of a year on account of sickness, spent his Sophomore year at the University of Florida and, thanks to his change of mind, returned in 1920. Since then he has made an enviable record for himself and is one of those few who can pull three "I's" on three foreign languages. In fact, "parley voo-ing" is his specialty. To illustrate, a Freshman early in the Fall thought he was in foreign quarters when he came upon Parcell and his friend "Tramp" discussing some feminine topic "a la Frog".

His interest in "La Belle France" was the cause of a trip to Tours in France where he studied for four months in the Summer of 1922. As he goes onward, striving for the finer and nobler things in life, we will watch him with interest, for some day we hope he will return to make our campus his home. His next tack will be to string a few Ph.D's and X, Y, Z's, to his name for convenience sake, and then (as Brother Green would say) "Oh, Boy!"

WITH a pleasant expression always on his face and a very pleasing personality, Parker is liked by all with whom he comes in contact. Since coming to the University he has made a record of which any man could be justly proud. In mathematics, his major subject, he is a genius, as is shown by his being an instructor of math in his Senior year. In every branch of learning, Parker is a free-thinker and has his own opinion whether or not they agree with other's opinions. In spite of his many strong qualities he has one great weakness which all his many friends are hoping he will overcome when he gets out in broader life than is found in Chapel Hill. This great weakness which I am afraid will ruin his noble career is his strong attachment for the fair members of the opposite sex. At the first glance of a pretty girl he goes absolutely "looney" and stays thus as long as he continues to see the girl. This seems highly inconsistent considering the fact that he is bitterly opposed to all co-edism, but thus has he gone against the laws of nature. However, in spite of this weakness, there is a great future ahead of him and we will all be sadly disappointed if we do not hear afterwards of great things accomplished by W. VANN PARKER.

OUR Senior Med Class President richly deserves the many honors that have been bestowed upon him. Not only was he a brilliant student in his academic work but he has carried the same record in the more difficult medical cause. When Dr. Jim Bullitt makes one of his long runs and passes by every member of the class, "Hap" rushes to the rescue and throws the doctor for a loss.

As Professor of Toxicology he was quite successful, and Dr. MacNider very frequently refers to his monumental work in that field. But Howard does not confine his interest to the mere routine study of medicine, for not infrequently does he spend the week-end at Sweet Briar or St. Mary's. But the strange thing about his "affairs" is that he is continually changing girls. He will be thoroughly "vamped" for a few weeks and then it will all be over and he will have his heart set on another "sweet one". His greatest asset, however, is his never-ending "line." He is a polished gentleman, a brilliant student, and a good sport, and will make a record wherever he goes.

For all her demureness there's a twinkle lurking in her eyes betokening a very real sense of humor. To this her fellow students of English '21 will bear witness, while the members of the Woman's Association will tell you that at a picnic supper Pearl is as good a sport as they make 'em. "Buck" and Bill Hanner are not his only friends by a long shot, even if he is seen with them most. PONDY" emigrated from near Asheville in 1919 to Chapel Hill and has been a resident of this vale of college courses and co-eds ever since, the while acquiring almost every college honor possible for a man to obtain.

He has the record of being one of the best guards in the history of University football elevens, he is a student of ability, and a man of influence among his fellows. In his Junior year the crowning glory of the Golden Fleece was bestowed upon him, while his Senior year finds him president of the college Y. M. C. A. and a leader in all college activities, including heavyweight wrestling.

To be a mighty man among lawyers and before the judge is "Pondy's" ambition, and with his capacity as a student and his bulldog spirit of determination, it is expected that it will be the last resort of many a desperate criminal, or maybe of many corporations barressed with the details of the anti-trust laws.

LAURIE hails from Clayton, which he claims is heaven to him. Prepping at Oak Ridge and finishing there in '21, he came to Carolina a very dignified fellow, hard to learn, but once learned is always your friend. Laurie is one of those good-natured, congenial fellows who are the same one day as the next. Moreover, he is fully capable of delivering the goods whenever called upon. During his stay on the "Hill" Laurie has made many friends. A good student and a friend in need.

With all requirements of a good business man he should be a big success in the business world. A man and a leader in his profession of whom we should all be proud.

WINNIFRED is amember of that never-to-be-forgotten group of co-eds who created a powerful commotion about the campus and in Josephus Daniels' daily excuse, when they requested the building committee to award them a paltry $300,000 for a woman's dormitory.

Well, anyway, Winnifred is a "plum good co-ed", and her long suit is chemistry. Whenever she comes off a chemistry quiz of examination one has to be delegated to lead the instructor off the class, for he is certainly a blinded prof.

She was classed as a student at Queen's College for a short time, but decided that a higher education might be obtained only in an air of masculine seriousness; hence, her advent on this campus and her record as a student of serious purpose.

STUMP—not a tree—one of the prides of Guilford County since entering the University has become quite a gymnast, but regardless of this he has not failed to prepare himself for entrance into Harvard where he plans to inform himself on the legal profession.

But the gymnasium and his studies have not kept "Stump" away from social activities, and he is usually present at all important social events on and off the "Hill".

This last fact causes great joy among the representatives of the Finchly establishment, "Stump" being one of its main patrons and victims.

Thus we see him—as a gymnast, a well groomed and agreeable classmate, and a good student. As he leaves us to go to another school in search of more knowledge, the fondest wish of the class is that he attain a success parallel to that on this campus.

THIS man beat Dave Sinclair out for manager of Varsity football in his Junior year, which fact should be a sufficient recommendation for his ability as a politician.

Jimmie is an ardent admirer of the Finchley clothiers and he has done his best to help the firm out since his tenure on the campus.

He has taken time away from his studies to pass time on the baseball diamond and also upon the waxed floor of Bynum Gymnasium when Weidmyer furnished the music and all the belles of three States were "tripping the light fantastic."

As a manager of Varsity football he has the distinction of piloting the best pigskin-carrying machine that the University has ever sent out to beat its ancient rival on her own field.

Withal, he has been right much of an all-around man, and if the crown of Phi Beta Kappa does not adorn his brow, it is not because he has not been a student but because he has divided his activities so as to cover a wide field.

PETER Augustus Reavis, or "Gus", is a man who has lived a very full life during his tenure on the campus, participating in virtually every phase of college life, including the Carolina Club.

He has been a leader, and a politician of some ability, but it is said that he entertains a complete abhorrence for the French language written or spoken.

"Gus" says he and a "chic" young thing down in the State of Alabama have reached a mutual agreement as to the general end and purpose of life, and, so, as soon as he can collect a living for two from the world, he intends to abandon the state of single blessedness for double harness.

As an artist in the age-old practice of passing out a line of pleasing plausibility, he is a past-master, and this, together with an attractive personality and a great desire to get along in the world, will enable him to ascend the ladder two steps at a time.

REUBEN" is truly a jovial soul. He has gained permanent possession of a spot in all our hearts. We always feel better after hearing a portion of his plentiful line. He is a product of the metropolis of Hillsborough, but has been here on the Hill so long that he is one of the landmarks along with the Davie Poplar. Ever since the famous week-end in Richmond, "B. N." has been a sadder and a wiser man and is working mighty hard. He is quite a caveman, but has given up his many platonic (?) affairs, so as to master pathology in a fundamental manner. With all his work, "Reuben" still finds time to visit Watts Hospital very often. He is the original founder and "Grand High Much" of the Royal Order of Human Parasites, and by his efforts this organization has become famous. He, and "Fludie" Smith, and "Doc" Stillwell will ever be remembered for their heroic work in the dissecting room.

We think a lot of "Reuben". It's been a treat to know him and to listen to him; and we can't wish for enough good things for him in his profession. He didn't want us to say anything about any Western medical schools, so we didn't.

Coot is a smooth-talking, even-tempered fellow who wears his clothes likes a model and who is, in fact, a true Chesterfield, both in looks and in manner, for anticipating the outcome of athletic events, "Coot" shoves Grantland Rice to the wall.

He has an unusually attractive personality, and no set of dances would be complete without his presence. His record is good and Carolina holds him in esteem for the place that he holds on the campus. Aside from being somewhat of a social light, "Coot" has considerable gray matter stored away in his head. And have you ever heard him speak unfavorably of anyone?

YOU can tell by "Rob's" looks that he was cut out for a parson (look at the solemn expression), but he says that he was called to serve his country by rolling pills. He has the distinction of being the only man in the class that is called Daddy. His skill when it comes to rocking the cradle is nothing compared to his skill with the "mortar and pestle". "Rob" is a pretty good student and has managed to get by with most of his work, but when grades come from the Pick it is always A-1. Although we have shortened his name to "Rob" we hope that when he hangs out his shingle he won't live up to this nickname but will be lenient on his customers. We all wish "Rob" much success in his chosen field and are expecting great things from him in the future.

M. A. J. R., or "Rosy", is one of the biggest men in our Senior med. class and a leader in everything. He is our chief athlete and has distinguished himself on the diamond. Had it not been for the strenuous medical course, there is no doubt but that he would have made the Old Dominion bite the dust. He not only has speed in the pitcher's box, but he handles Gray, McCallum, and Harvett with the ease of a veteran. He early distinguished himself in anatomy by discovering the "thorakik duct", and immediately Dr. Charley took notice and picked him for an assistant.

He can name the muscles of the forearm or the branches of the ophthalmic artery with as little trouble as he can find the postoffice. M. A. J. BENEDICT, the married man—or Harold Lacey Ross, alias "Shike", alias Manager of Varsity basketball, and electrical engineer and radio expert of no inconsiderable fame.

Lacy entered the ranks of the "home and fireside" some time during his Junior year; a fair young thing from Greensboro going up the church aisle to the strains of Mendelssohn with him that semester.

"Shike" did not allow domestic duties to keep him from the completion of his course, however, and this year he graduates with an enviable reputation behind him in the School of Engineering, in spite of the fact that the larger part of his last year in College was taken up by the managership of the Varsity basketball squad and the duty of amusing the large number of loafers domiciled in Pettigrew with his radio set.

As an athlete he has made his mark and over-jumped many other man's while he pastimed in the sawdust pit as Coach Bob's premier broad-jumper.

GEORGE Washington Carr", as he is familiarly known to the Student Body, hails from the "Sand Hills" of North Carolina. From his name you would think of him as a distinguished son of nobility which is not altogether erroneous. George is a handsome young man with a winning personality, not unlike his namesake.

George is a student of unusual ability and works hard for the higher ideals in pharmacy. All of his time, however, is not spent with books. You will find him present at all the dances; there he never fails to "shake a wicked foot."

KING" hails from Kenly, N. C. The most prominent thing about him is his nose which distinguishes him as a typical Southerner. He came to Carolina back in the old days, but delayed his medical course in order to be true to Uncle Sam in the Navy blue. There was never a Bullitt that excited him, for his armor plate of knowledge is able to shield them all. The only mistake he ever made was in the dissecting hall when he chose "Jake" for a partner.

Upon first meeting you would perhaps think him a little quiet, but that is because he is one of those kind who knows more than he will tell. On more intimate acquaintance, however, you find him a big-hearted, congenial fellow and with sterling qualities. To come in contact with him is to experience a wholesome pleasure. His mild manners and his sunny smile carry one away into a world of sunshine.

"K. C." is known in the Med. School for his hard work and consistent grinding; qualities which go to make up a good student. He is sure to make a physician of the highest type.

DAWSON EMERSON SCARBOROUGH

JUDGE", as he is known on the campus, entered the University in '17, with the intention of graduating with the Class of '25, but through his diligence he is pulling down his LL.B. with the Class of '23. He came here a blushing youth of tender years, and departs a lawyer, developed into the finished product of manhood in proportion to the growth of the University.

During the two years of his student life as manager of Swain Hall he has portrayed his sterling qualities as a man of character and business ability, and is probably the best known student on the campus. It may truly be said of him that he thinks deep, says little, and accomplishes much. Not content to start out into the world with his LL.B. and law license alone, he intends to obtain the other kind and form a partnership. We predict for him a long and and successful career in his chosen profession.

KNOWN by some as "W. J.", by others as "Scrooge", he is nevertheless the same to all. Rather quiet, unassuming, studious, determined, he is one of those rare souls who ever since he first put foot in Chapel Hill has kept constantly before him his purpose in coming to Carolina, and he has served that purpose well. There is no superfluous flow of language from him as from others more or less fortunate. Absorbed in his work, and consistent, he confidently looks forward to further study at "Jeff" or Tulane.

It is said that in the Summer of '19, when "Scrooge" helped save the big wheat crop out in Oklahoma, he developed a distinct pathogenicity for a female of the species, and to this day he regularly receives a pink-scented envelope bearing the postmark of the western town.

"W. J.'s" ambition is to own and be chief surgeon in a hospital. This is certain of realization, for besides other congenital blessings he has a keen business sense, having been able to sell a road map to an aviator, and if sincere purpose, hard study, and efficiency mean anything, "Scruggs" will be an excellent surgeon.

NORMAN W. SHEPHERD

SHEP" returned from France and his contest with the Prussian Guards in time to enter as a Freshman in 1919. He early sprung into prominence as an athlete, captaining the First Year Reserve football team. Largely in recognition of his fine leadership of the team he was made president of the class. In the memorable snow fight of that year between the Freshman and Sophomore classes, when snowballs were soaked in water and equipped with cores of adamantite rock, "Shep" led the myrmidons of his class in the final charge which overwhelmed the Sophomores at their last stand around the well, and stood leader of the first Freshman Class that ever captured the well from the "Sophs".

He left us for a while and went to Davidson where he made an enviable record at football and baseball. He decided to return to the shade of the Davie Poplar the next year, but, unfortunately for University athletics, he had lost his amateur standing by playing the role of leading pitcher for the Little Rock Club during the Summer.

Norman has also been quite a student of the problems of commerce and political economy. In fact, "Dud" Carroll will let him take almost any course he chooses. He closes his Senior year with a fine record as a student, as a coach of Freshmen teams, and as a leader in class and University activities.

T. H. SHEPARD he was christened, but around about Ye Campus Universitat-Carol-Septent, he is most commonly known as "Tommy"—vest-pocket edition of Hercules and football-end extraordinary.

He came to Chapel Hill with a vaulting ambition to play on a football team that beat Virginia and to acquire the rudiments of an engineer's education. He wears an "N. C." annexed (with distinction) at a Thanksgiving contest with Virginia.

Incidentally, he is a member of Bob Griffith's Dog and Gun Club—the Deke Annex. He is also somewhat of a co-ed dilettante, having developed the habit of signaling to them vocally across the campus from the Deke porch.

All in all, "Hawk" Shepard has left a lasting mark on the memory of his campus associates during his tenure at this center of learning, and he will leave with an unusually wide range of friends and acquaintances who will remember him as the smallest man who ever played a Varsity end and as the best engineer in the City of Edenton, of Playmaker fame.

SMITH, C. C., as Dr. Kent Brown always called him, invariably putting his initials last, is a quiet, philosophical sort of fellow and a real student of human nature. The sources from which he draws his conclusions are somewhat obscure, since his natural reserve prevents direct ascertainment of just how rich are his life experiences, but it is certain that his logical reasoning is due to the many courses of math piled up to his credit on Dr. Wilson's books. He has developed uncanny powers of observation, and practices to perfection the art of "profiting by the experiences of others".

As philosophers are wont to do, Smith has excluded many pleasures, including girls and the necessary accessories, such as dancing, etc. However, it must not be omitted that he is skillful in composing love letters and his refined English brings him many answers. The suspicion is well grounded that the aim of this practice is merely to secure knowledge, since he always feigns excuses when invited to mingle with the gentler sex. But he is not of the cynical type and will turn out all right. The girls will be given a chance, at the proper time, and success will surely reward his efforts.

CALVIN has been consistently a student since he began his University career, and this interest has won for him the highest scholarship honors in our class. Quiet, unassuming, he has journeyed through four years of College life paying strict attention to his duties and shouldering his responsibilities in a manly fashion.

His close affiliation with the members of the school in which he has matriculated has given him the opportunity to exert a leadership among their ranks, and this he has fully availed himself of. The various schools of applied Science are accustomed to producing holders of high scholarship records, and "C. U." is one of the best examples. In spite of this distinction, our subject possesses a real taste for play, and throughout he has combined wholesome enjoyment with thorough application.

SMITHY", so called by her masculine classmates and associates, in entering the sphere of pharmacy has attained one of her ambitions but not her highest one. Her first desire was to be a doctor, and only on being dissuaded from entering the medical field did she decide on pharmacy, cousin-german of medicine. But we are sure she will succeed in her second choice, for it has its attractions for her just as medicine.

It would seem that "Smithy's" presence in the Pharmacy School as the only co-ed of her class would have a tendency to put a cold and somewhat reserved air on the hitherto questionable jokes of the pharmaceutical professors. The jokes still continue, but they are no longer questionable. "Smithy" has clarified the air of the Pharmacy School and made it a place fit to stay in. SOcially, Jack has been on the map here since a Sophomore, even if he did come from the suburbs of Greenville. If you have ever been to any of the dances, you have seen Jack, for if he wasn't there he was in the Infirmary or something worse—the latter most likely, because he has never been known to be sick. His election as best dancer in the class is proof that he is no mean dancer.

But this is only one of Jack's many accomplishments. It has been rumored that he once went out for track and also dabbled in politics. Not overstudious, he is no bad student, and even has to be reckoned with in economics, although not "Dud" disciple.

He has one main fault and that is his judgment of women. What he says on the subject is final, but we have to overlook this because so little is known on the subject and he has had as much or more experience than most of us. RALPH E. SPAUGH comes from the metropolis of the State renowned for tobacco, Ethiopians, and Moravians, and like all youths of Moravian derivation, he "toots a horn". Due to this same ability as a horn-tooter, he has been prominent as a member of all musical clubs of the University.

His stentorian voice has often been recognized in the chorus of "we are the people" on nights when the Betas chose to knock on the table and hold conversation ancient the prospects for an exceeding large initiation the next Fall.

Ralph's activities have been limited to work in the musical organizations and his work in the School of Commerce where he is a thorough disciple of all conservative doctrines of business conduct. He has majored in accounting, and that alone speaks for his courage and ability as a student.

Pass on, Ye Man of Destiny, as a Captain of Industry.

NO, GIRLS, don't get excited, 'cause he's perfectly harmless and quite susceptible to feminine charms.

As a bit of history:—"Lord Chesterfield" migrated to us from the Far West somewhere in the "land of the sky"—uncontaminated by the vices of civilization and unlearned in the wiles and ways of a "cookie-pusher". But he rapidly overcame this and he even now wears shoes and other such accessories. Being one of our youngest classmates he is frequently confronted with the question: "Are you a Freshman?" Aided by his manly physique he goes on unshaken. It is rumored that he is in love, 'cause he has been seen to make at least "humpteen" trips to the postoffice every day. It's all over a certain somebody at Greenville. It may be serious, but nobody knows.

Quite an optimist at all times and it is said that "Doc's" smiling face will "brighten the saddest day and make a bright day brighter still". We know he'll make a success, but perhaps one thing will be a handicap—that is, his tendency to be slow and easy. We believe that he'll overcome this when he trades his second-hand fliwver for a "super-natural six".

BEHOLD a real linguist! Spanish, Italian, German—none of these hold any terror for "Studie". He's even planning to come back next year and take graduate work in Spanish. He will be Professor of Romance Language at some College some day, we expect. Someone said that "Studie" intended to major in Latin, but one G. K. G. Henry caused him to decide on Spanish. This same Henry kept him from wearing the much-coveted Key we are old.

"Studie" is a fine fellow, sociable, attractive, in fact, an all-round good fellow. His side line specialties are music (violin), and O. C. C. (a special brand). We hear that his repeated trips to N. C. C. W. will land him in South Carolina. Possibly that's where the "some College" will be. Best wishes to you, "Studie".

GEORGE, for some reason, rarely leaves his chosen retreat on Rosemary Street to grace Chapel Hill's pride and main thoroughfare—Franklin Avenue; and neither is the campus favored with his melancholy features. We believe, however, that the reason for this confinement is his desire to discover the ingredients of the "Fountain of Youth" if there be chemicals that can perform that job.

Women, and especially co-eds, have no attraction for this purblind young chemist, for who would not be lured by the co-ed, even as a moth to a street-corner light. But we understand that "George R." blossoms out in his "ain home village" where there be no co-eds, and is there a very devil among the fair ones.

Anyway, women or no women, co-eds or no co-eds, we know that he will not let anything detract him from becoming the famed and learned Prof. George Richard Stout, an honor to the chemical profession, also an ornament.

Ask him some time about the little up at Columbia.

Milk and bran are his daily diet and afternoon labs are his daily exercise. And here's a tip to future business men. If you are hard up for a good electrical engineer about 1937, wire Atlanta for "Bill" Stribbling—you will not go wrong.

A man with an athletic build which was wasted on the dance floor and other forms of diversion? Caused by two side kicks, Buck Martin and Bill Hannah, still we all hate to lose this old boy and we predict for him a future path strewn with Roses of Success.

CY", LIKE his home town, is small, quiet and unassuming. Though small in stature he has big ideas and carries quite a lot of pharmaceutical knowledge. He is the "Class Baby", but is the last resort when one of Dean Howell's perplexing questions has to be answered quickly.

Although he has accumulated much wisdom in the preceding two years he is not satisfied with the common Ph.G., but will next year journey once more to the "Hill" and delve into the realms of advanced pharmacy. After that he will, no doubt, be very successful in his chosen profession.

RAT" THOMPSON is essentially an engineer—an electrical engineer. With it he is one of the best fellows in the Class of 1923. He is a quiet sort of a chap, but only when the occasion requires such, because those who have been closely associated with him have learned that he is pretty apt to express himself, and they have learned to value highly whatever "Rat" has to say on any matter.

During the present year he spent several months away from the University as a representative of the electrical engineering students, doing "practical" work in Danville. His friends would not have allowed him to agree to any such plan had they known that such an absence on his part would ensue. Thus we have been allowed to enjoy his presence only a few months during the year, but we have made the best of the situation. We present "Rat" as a splendid example of those gentlemanly, strong and sincere members in which the Class of 1923 lodges its pride.

JANE came here from Saint Mary's where she graduated in 1920. It would be hard to tell all the things that go to make up a character and personality such as Jane's. Whether you see her presiding over a meeting of the U. N. C. Woman's Association or on the ballroom floor she has that same poise. Nobody ever saw Jane without a smile on her face. If she is ever unhappy she manages to conceal it. And perhaps that is why everybody likes her. In "Agatha" she has proved to us that she is an amateur genius in play-writing. Her play was a great success, and is one of the many things by which we shall remember her. Jane, in fact, has many marked qualities of the "literati". And above all, she's a "good sport".

JUDGE Trotter, formerly (or rather informally) known as "Pike", has always been idealistic, but his ideals are now rather shaded by certain judicious characteristics. It came about this way:

After dabbling about the law for a couple of years he met the Supreme Court in February on its own battleground in Raleigh. He overcame the enemy right nobly, whereupon there was great rejoicing. In surrendering, the treaty of peace stated that "Pike" should be allowed to have the rather significant words, "attorney at law", printed on his letterheads. It is predicted that these will some day be changed to words of even more significance.

Our young lawyer has done everything from associating with that evil little Tar Baby to presiding over that ancient oligarchy, the Di Society. Oh, yes, we forgot to say that which is usually said. He is a darn' good fellow, does well in his studies, and has many friends; and in this case it is really true.

THOMAS TURNER, "T" Turner, but most generally just plain "Tommy", is a mighty nice boy. Tommy shines, (not shines it) in the social whirl of the Yarrowburgh Hotel during Fair Week on Norman Forester's English #000.

A straight thinker, an astute politician, a natural leader, he stepped forward in his Junior year to the presidency of the Junior Class and made a success of it. We remember, in fact we can never forget, that memorable night when the votes for the president of the Student Body were being counted. "Tommy" was running against Harmon, and "Tommy" and us were playing bridge in "Tommy's" room. "Ike" was around the Y. M. C. A. (the only time he was ever there), trying to find out how the election came out. "Ike" came in all excited and announced the election of Harmon. "Tommy" was holding a good hand and immediately bid a "no trump" and we continued to play bridge. Thus "Tommy" passed through the very zenith of his College career and showed himself to be as fine a loser as he had been winner.

THERE'S one born every minute, but all are not gifted with a combination equal to "Red's". Not only is he with his golden locks and winning ways a ladies' man, but also as ardent a disciple of Esculapius. His place among the students of anatomy last year was not only illuminated by his flaming hair but by a surpassing knowledge of Gray's Anatomy.

This year his greatest ambition seems to be toward becoming one of Dr. Lawson's most skilled men in bandaging. If there is any virtue in patience and love of the subject he should be unexcelled. He is the Med School's Mellen's Food Baby and the man who discovered a certain important scientific method relating to vena cava.

"Red" is not so dignified to those who know him, but is instead one of our most congenial fellows. His future as a practitioner if he locates in Oxford is predicted to be a menace to his father's undertaking establishment. Seriously, "Red's" coming out all right.

IF ALL the co-eds were like this one we believe the complaint against co-education at the University would be swallowed up by the cry for more co-eds. You have only to glance above to verify this statement for yourself and recognize the College man's idea of what a co-ed should be. Now when to this fluffy, bobbed hair, queenly grace, and captivating smile you add the ability to make the honor roll, the popularity that elects her to the secretaryship of the Woman's Association, and gives her a rush at the dances, and the enthusiasm in all branches of College activities, you have the kind of co-ed as everybody says she should be. "Vallie" is every bit this and more. The man that can persuade her to change her name for his will be lucky, indeed.

PAULINE is a girl of many and high aspirations. Even while beginning Latin and French in the Chapel Hill High School she aspired to an A.B. from the University of North Carolina. She has always wished for an opportunity to develop her musical talent and has been able to see this wish materialize in spite of the many other demands of her College courses. She plays with equal grace and skill the sacred anthem on the pipe organ or the latest dance step on the piano. She, too, has been a close runner-up for the honor roll.

And say, boys! Have you ever snacked your lips over a plate full of Pauline's Sea Foam Candy? 'Tis the food of the gods, indeed. Next to her Sea Foam, Pauline's cocoanut cake is supreme. Dame Rumor has it that after a year in the school-room Pauline is going to start practice in the culinary art for a limited number. Oh! You lucky boy.

FRANCES VENABLE

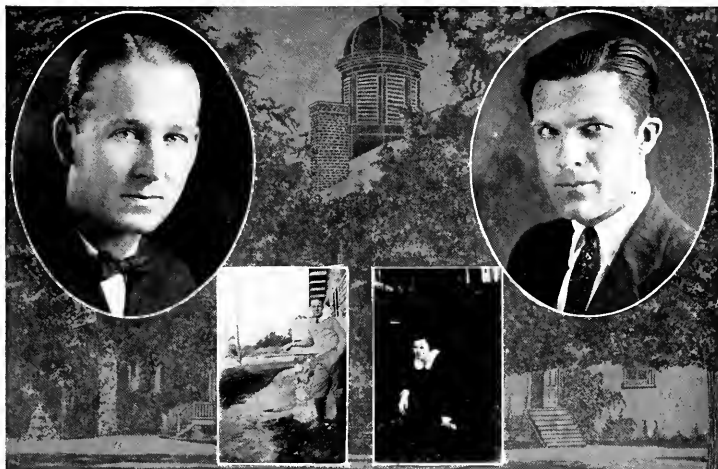

Chapel Hill, N. C.

FRANCES schooled at St. Mary's during our Freshman and Sophomore year, and her Senior year she was voted the best all-around girl in her class, and that without any politics, too.

During two years with the Class of 1923 she has lived up to this reputation, occupying high positions in the council of the Woman's Association, making "I's" on French and other courses, and has been the moving spirit of the Beta Alpha Phi sorority. She is a familiar figure at all the dances, even though she will faint now and then.

She is the unanimous choice of this class as the best-all-around co-ed, and fails to obtain that distinction only because there has never been one before, and 'twas thought a shame to break a precedent.

But in the minds and hearts of the members of the Class of 1923 she will always be remembered as the rare combination of good student and "good fellow".

AGENTLEMAN by instinct, an athlete by hope, and a genius by nature—this is Julius Jennings Wade. This name, "J. J. Wade", has appeared at the end of many literary productions and editorials for the past four years, but to everyone who has strolled about the campus he has been known as just "Jake". In his Freshman year, "Jake" had great athletic ambitions, but he abandoned these for his little playmate, the Tar Heel, which, 'tis said, he raised from a pup.

"Jake" has been engaged in several College activities and has attained a place of leadership in them all. It can justly be said that he is one of our leaders. As a writer of considerable ability he will undoubtedly succeed in his chosen profession of journalism, which he aspires to make a stepping stone to even greater literary achievement.

HERE'S a man who is counted, not among the dead, but the married. Yes, 'tis true. About Christmas of this, his Senior year in medicine, he could withstand the flying arrows from Cupid's busy bow no longer and Harold became the worse half of that eternal bond, but he's a smart boy for all of that and ranks with the best in his class.

Perhaps that isn't quite right to her—in fact, if we had been the objects of the love darts in this particular case we are much afraid we couldn't have fought them off, either. She is really a wonderful little girl, and Harold's classmates wish her, with him, all the happiness they could want for themselves.

The promising young candidate for an M.D. is a many-sided sort of individual. He can sing, and strum a guitar, and study, and win a girl's heart, and it is said that once he preached a sermon. If a man's record in College is any indication of what he may be expected to do when he leaves, you can count on Harold making good, for he has certainly made good here.

HERE'S a man. "Cy" or "Si" or however you spell it, is at home anywhere, on the gridiron and the athletic field in general, in the ball room, in his fraternity hall, in a meeting of literary students who want to discuss George Bernard Shaw and this writer or that writer with a man who knows something about them all, and last and best of all, he's at home in his own room with "Tommy" and "Ikey", and any of the other boys when they want to study hard or want to hold a good old session.

Perhaps, aside from his graduating in three years after entering here, the time we were proudest of "Cy" was when Coach Bill took him with the team on the trips and sent him in to fight for Carolina's football glory. But there are many things which will cause us to remember him, one of them being his nose, which is off the point, perhaps, but a point well taken. And there are several things which he will be likely to remember, one of the main ones being that week when he had to wear the same clothes for a month. When he gets out into the world he'll have enough friends to give him a good law practice aside from the many calls we are sure he will get from others.

There are two things we should like to know concerning this young man: First, how he got in with Dean Howell on the fur business, and his percent of profit or number of boots; Second, how that girl he sports here got the name of "matron". BEHOOLD ye this writer of Latin sonnets who hails from the City by the Sea famed for aristocracy and backwardness in other respects.

Payson, however, is not backward, unless the fact that he has devoted himself absolutely to his studies during four years of College be called backwardness. Payson regards athletics, or rather the watching of athletic events, a species of youthful follies, and it is believed that he is the only man who has ever gone through the University without attending a single athletic contest. During the Virginia game of his Sophomore year he remained in his room and composed a Latin sonnet with "Runt" Lowe beating Virginia only a few yards off.

This fact of itself proves that E. Payson is an extraordinary young man, and the long line of "T's" opposite his name in Tommie J.'s office is additional.

"Duke" graduates as one of the best scholars in the class, and his classmates wish him well in a career of scholarship.

PEP", as he is generally known on the campus, is one of those silent forces of which the University so proudly boasts. Entering at first in the College of Liberal Arts he soon discovered that he was in the "wrong pew," and so decided to join the commerce group. Taking little interest in the activities of the campus, "Pep" has plodded the trail of a scholar pure and simple. At first you would think that he was very quiet and modest; his friends have easily penetrated within this outward reserve, and find combined with this quiet modesty, joviality a-plenty. He is every inch that his nickname signifies. He always goes at his work with diligence yet with an appearance that shows it to be a pleasure. He always has a smile for everyone, which makes us feel that one who so sees the bright side of life will inevitably get ahead. LLOYD P. WILLIAMS entered the University with the avowed intent and purpose of becoming an expert in oil—petroleum, not olive—but Prof. Koch lured him into the wiles of the Carolina Matchmakers before his Freshman year was over.

Lloyd has played some very good roles for the Playmakers, is the most demoniacal of the Satyrs, and has the record of being one of the best Varsity basketball managers since the indoor sport came into favor.

Lloyd has also been prominent in athletics, playing on the First Year Reserve football team, and has been a member of virtually every Varsity squad.

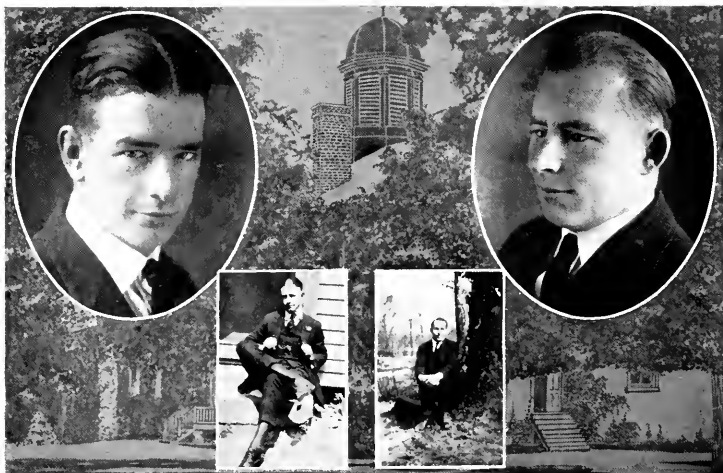

In fact, his whole College career is marked by versatility, his energies having been expended over a wide field of College activities.

He has not chosen the field for his life's endeavors, but into whatever profession he enters, his versatility will mark him for success.

THERE is not a man or co-ed who has been at Carolina for the last four years but who knows and admires "Mary" for his pluck and determination, his classroom achievements, and his jovial good-nature. "Mary" entered with us in our Freshman year handicapped by blindness, but has shown that a man should not give up under difficulties. He is a living example of the old adage, "Where there's a will there's a way".

He has been a student in the strictest sense of the word from the day he arrived on the Hill. The string of ones and twos in Tommie J.'s office will bear witness to this fact. Besides getting his A.B. in four years he has jumped ahead of the class a year, and during his Senior year we find him passing four courses in the Academic School and taking the entire first year law course. "Mary's" real worth as a student is shown when he can make an average of a two in the Law School under these conditions.

But to know the real man that lives in the person of "Mary", always jovial and full of fun, take him for a stroll, to some athletic contest, or get him in a good "session".

Carolina's best wishes go with you in your profession.

S"IM" "prepped" at Oak Ridge. Craving excitement and adventure he spent the following two years with Uncle Sam's boys, most of the time on a foreign soil. Immediately upon his return he entered Davidson, and during his stay of two years was a very popular athlete, being captain-elect of the 1922 baseball team. He entered Carolina in the Fall of '21, and immediately grasped the Carolina Spirit, and from his clean, sportsmanlike manner, neatness in appearance, and ability to make friends, won the esteem and friendship from all at Carolina.

He is quite a "Wallacite" with the ladies, but his attentions are not yet centered around any definite goal. Very often, though, he is seen making his way down main street of a nearby city to visit a famous female seat of learning situated just behind the State Capitol.

As a professional man he possesses all of the qualifications, and we feel sure of a successful career.

TURK" cut quite a figure among the fair dames of last year's Summer School. It is rumored that the Arboretum was every night regaled with the soft dulcinean tones of this amorous young swain of the mountain lands.

For "Turk" comes from the land of haughty tourists and eatamounds, familiarly known as the Land of the Sky, and he highly recommends the City of Asheville as a health resort to decrepid "Phi Betty Worms" and college professors.

Yates is said to be the author of the book on card games now selling at Foister's at a premium. but, of course, he says that there is evidently some mistake in this, for he is only the author of "How to Get Blooch P. Q. D. in the mountains".

When "Turk" leaves U. N. C. we hope that he will some day be sole owner of the Palace City Pool Room and Billiard Parlor in his home town.

VIC is young, handsome, and energetic, possessing an attractive and pleasing personality. He is a human dynamo of progressiveness and has at least two other strong points. His forensic achievements remain unequalled. He has a hobby for organizations and is a guiding light in the University's organic world. Although he has mastered the art of debating and has fathomed the mysteries of politics and philosophy, Freshman chemistry affords an interesting puzzle for him. "Vic" has a keen ear for argument, but is totally deaf to the summons of a flotilla of alarm clocks. He has a knack of getting the things he goes after, but we fear that some fair one has the same ability.

We hear that "Vic" intends to read law in his native town at Trinity next year, and if we did not know him we would be tempted to say, another good man gone wrong. He is a born leader and the type of man that puts his troubles in the bottom of his heart, sits on the lid, and smiles.

FOR he, while his companions slept, was toiling upward in the night."

We do not know whether he was or not, but somehow Herbert has accumulated a string of U's on Murchison's and Johnny Woosley's economic courses. This alone is enough of a recommendation for him. He is also a disciple of Dudley, and his splendid record in all his work has acquired for him a place close to the shrine.

Two of Herbert's favorite pastimes are campus politics and reading his quota of pink letters. His ever-pleasant disposition has aided him in the former and he has no trouble in receiving plenty of the latter.

"Herb" has not decided what field of business he will enter, but whatever he finally decides to do we know he will do well.

SENIOR CLASS

“Looking Backward”

THE Class of Twenty-three entered the University following war and pestilence. War had turned it for two years into a military camp in all but name, and pestilence had numbered among its victims three of its greatest men. Through it all we inherited from preceding classes a great body of traditions, but greatest of all a living spirit of human fellowship. Through our four years we have been imbued with this spirit to the extent that it shall ever remain as a part of our very being.

With the Class of Twenty-three there came to the University a new era, a new administration, and renewed activities. This can be realized only by looking back with our mind's eye, and seeing the old Durham Road over which we made our first trip to the Hill, the class field at the west end of the campus, and the tennis courts at the south side of the gym and the law buildings. Today, in their stead, we find a hard surface road, five new dormitories, a history and language building and a new law building. Our class is the largest in the history of the University, and each succeeding year has seen each class larger until the number of students has doubled in four years. The older alumni of the University said that in the growth of the Student Body would be lost the tradition and that venerable Carolina spirit. But, today, Davie Poplar and the Old Well retain their significance and mean to us the same as they meant to those of old.

As students we have probably had our shortcomings, but I will venture to say the class average in spite of its size is equal to or surpasses that of former classes. As members of Phi Beta Kappa group we boast of C. U. Smith, Rufus Koontz, C. H. Ashford, and Howard Holderness. And as members of Golden Fleece, Monk McDonald, Jake Wade, Alan McGee, Vick Young, and C. C. Poindexter.

In the field of athletics our class surpasses any class that has preceded us. In football, letters are worn by McDonald, the Morris Brothers, McGee, and Poindexter. All have met Virginia and N. C. State in both defeat and victory, and in defeat as well as VICTORY they have worn a smile. In baseball, our letter men are the Morris Brothers, McDonald, Shirley, McGee, and Bryson. These men have represented our class for three years on Carolina's Greatest Baseball Team. Nor will we ever forget the home run of "Casey" Morris that won the Wake Forest game, or the one that tied the game with Trinity in 1922. In Basketball, our class boasts of five letter men, McDonald, Carmichael, Mahler, Williams, and Graham, two of whom have been All-South Atlantic for the last two years. In track, our class has been represented by Sinclair who admits he can make the one hundred in ten flat; Ross who says he could always jump; and last but not least, Poindexter who handles the shot like so much sponge and hurls the javelin like knights of old. Our class has also produced two tennis champions—Jernigan and Bruton.

In literary activities our class probably has had its failings like other classes. The individual stars are few, yet we boast of one man who has as an individual broken all records in Intercollegiate Debates. This man is "Vick" Young. At the time of this writing, "Vick" has made five Intercollegiate Debates this year. Others of our class who are noted for debating activities are Kerr, Brown, McCoy, Hunt, and Hampton. All these men have made Intercollegiate Debates, and well have they performed their tasks.

Through our four years we have been piloted by McGee, McDonald, Turner, and Shirley. They have represented our class well, and are true representative men of the class as well as the University.

President Graham in his inaugural address defined the University as "a living Organism at the heart of a living Democratic State, interpreting its life, not by parts nor summary parts, but wholly fusing them into a new culture center, giving birth to a new humanism". President Chase took up the new spirit of former President Graham, and those ideals of democracy that are pleasing to a State have assumed a new life during our four years. The University has not only made material progress but has also advanced along moral lines. Student Government seems to have received a new impetus from some underlying secret of student life and, today, in the "Y" we find fruit booths operated on the honor system. Of course, our class does not claim the honor of having brought this about, but we have as a body and as individuals respected this system, and as upper classmen have led the way for other classes. Two of our number, Shirley and Harmon, have acted in this capacity and have served the Campus well.

Now that our span of four years is near a close, we look back and see our fortunes and misfortunes. Probably ambitions are unrealized. Probably ideals have been broken. Yet we look forward today as we did in Nineteen to the higher things of life. The knowledge acquired is but small compared with the life inspired. The scene being ended, the curtain lowered, we make our exit, but we leave behind us our spirit, which shall ever be a part of our Alma Mater.

Junior Class History

THE Fall of 1920 brought to the "Hill", as every other fall for the last one hundred and twenty-nine years has, "the largest class in the history of the University", numbering in this case about three hundred and fifty. This class, as every other class, had received "Freshman Bibles" before reaching the campus, and had read them so carefully that on arrival they were thoroughly familiar with the technical terms: "Pick", "Swain", "Tommy J.", etcetera.

Having read the cordial invitation to "College Night" in this booklet, on the night indicated all Freshmen were on hand at Gerrard Hall, where fluent speakers informed them that they were members of the Class of Twenty-four (they had not thought of that before), and that among their number were future athletic captains, able presidents, eloquent debaters, clever writers and actors. Speeches were made by the president of the Student Council, the captain of the football team, the editor of the Tar Heel, and the president of the "Y", who were objects of unadulterated hero worship.

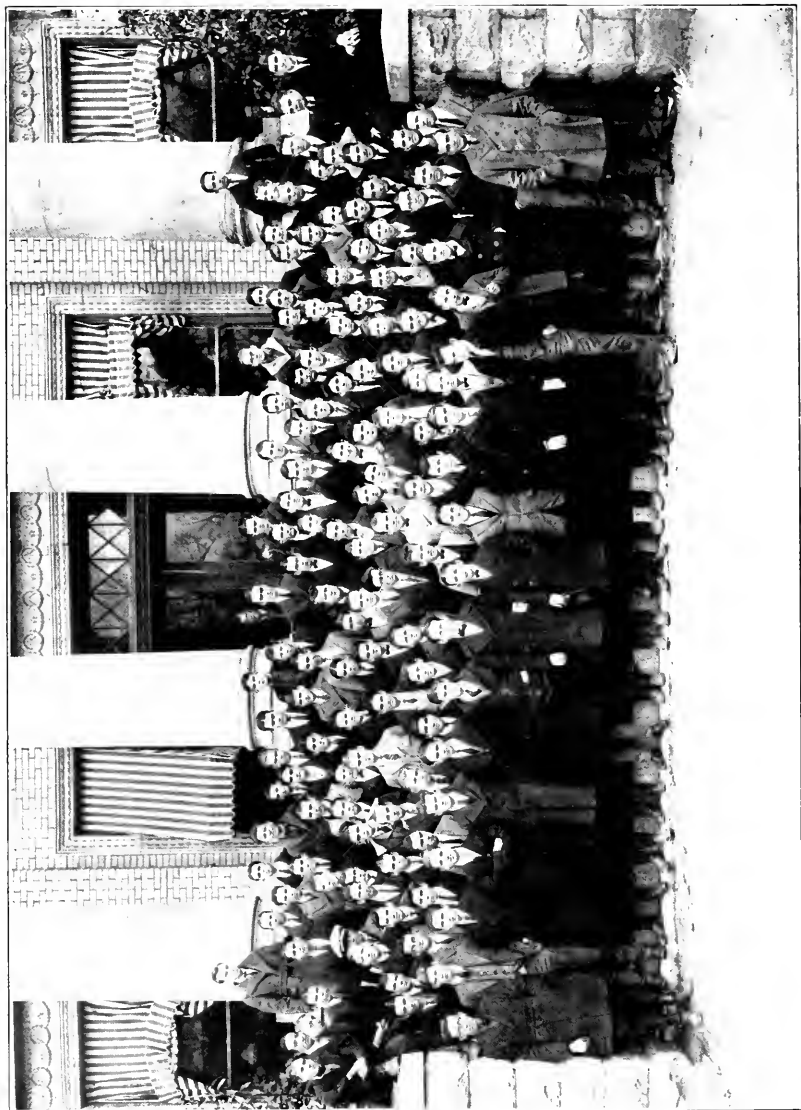

But as the days flew by and these men became intimate friends and as the novelty of calling the teacher "Professor" or "Doctor" wore off, the Class of Twenty-four forthwith demonstrated its adaptability to conditions by putting into operation what they had heard of politics at Carolina. Two men announced themselves as candidates for the distinction of president of the Freshman Class. These men were "Candidate" Turner and "Candidate" Moore. Stump speeches were made at Swain Hall and the postoffice, which resulted in one instance in the said candidate receiving an impromptu bath. But to everybody's surprise, when elections came off, neither of the "Candidates" were even nominated, and B. M. Gillon of Concord, captain of the Freshman football team, was elected president of the Freshman Class. After that, all went well until the snow fight in which Twenty-four came out victors over the terrible Sophs in the annual "Battle of the Well". The next feature was in the spring, when the Sophomores conferred upon their minors the "Boo-Loo" honors, making Tom Woodard, president. The spring elections resulted in J. V. Ambler of Asheville being made president of the Sophomore Class and Twenty-four's first member of the Student Council.

The following summer and the sophomore year ran off all too quickly. The hated word "Fresh" was no more a taunt to Twenty-four. Latent talent in the class's ranks now began to show itself and many coveted college honors were won. As Sophomores, the class received the Freshmen in the same manner as they themselves had been received. Spring elections made C. Y. Coley of Rockingham president of the Junior Class, but since Mr. Coley did not return to college, C. A. Holshouser of Salisbury was elected to take his place in the Fall of 1922.

The class then got down to business in earnest, and "adopted" the entering Freshmen as "buddies". Letters of welcome had been sent by individuals during the summer under the supervision of a Junior committee. In the winter, a Junior-Freshman Smoker was held in Swain Hall at which six hundred members of the two classes were present. Ties of friendship were pledged by the presidents of the two classes, and now Twenty-four looks hopefully forward to its greatest year, the Senior, when its members will dominate the campus and really accomplish something for Carolina.

Why Carolina Wins

COACH "BOB"

Athletically speaking the University of North Carolina has reigned supreme in North Carolina and in the South Atlantic division for the past year. The South Atlantic Championship in football and one of the three undefeated teams of the South in the same sport, tells the story of the football season. The undisputed Champions of the State and the South Atlantic division in basketball, and the Southern Championship in baseball, State Championship in indoor and outdoor track and Southern Champions in tennis tells the story of a remarkable and outstanding athletic history for the year.

There are a number of reasons for athletic supremacy. One is a wealth of material. Carolina was not swamped with fine material. Another is coaching.

COACH "BILL"

Therein lies the plot of the athletic story. No school in the South has the combination of science and leadership in a coaching staff as has Carolina in Coach Bill and Coach Bob.

Taught to play the game in a scientific gentlemanly manner without any idea as to the final score, the teams, with a thorough knowledge of how it is done, simply went in and did it. They won, first; because they knew the game, and second; because they had behind them the quiet confidence of two men and the noisy support of two thousand enthusiastic students who didn't believe they could lose.

It is a thrilling thing to win. With a sweep of the eye through this section one may see in story, in figure and picture the flash of Johnston in the V. M. I. game or the magnificent run of Monk McDonald in the State game, or Carmichael on the court. At a glance we can bring back the thrill that swept through us as Carolina grimly stepped to the bat in the ninth inning and went smashing through the heavy clouds of defeat that hung over the diamond and in a hair-raising finish stepped forth into the sunshine of a beautiful victory over Trinity.

Cold type can hardly bring back the almost religious fervor of that hectic day in Charlottesville. No memory of college days will burn so bright in our minds as does the thought of "Hark the Sound of Tar Heel Voices" shaking the rafters of the old Gleason Hotel in Charlottesville that night, as the "Old Boys" gathered around the desk and while they beat time with their feet, poured forth the great old college anthem.

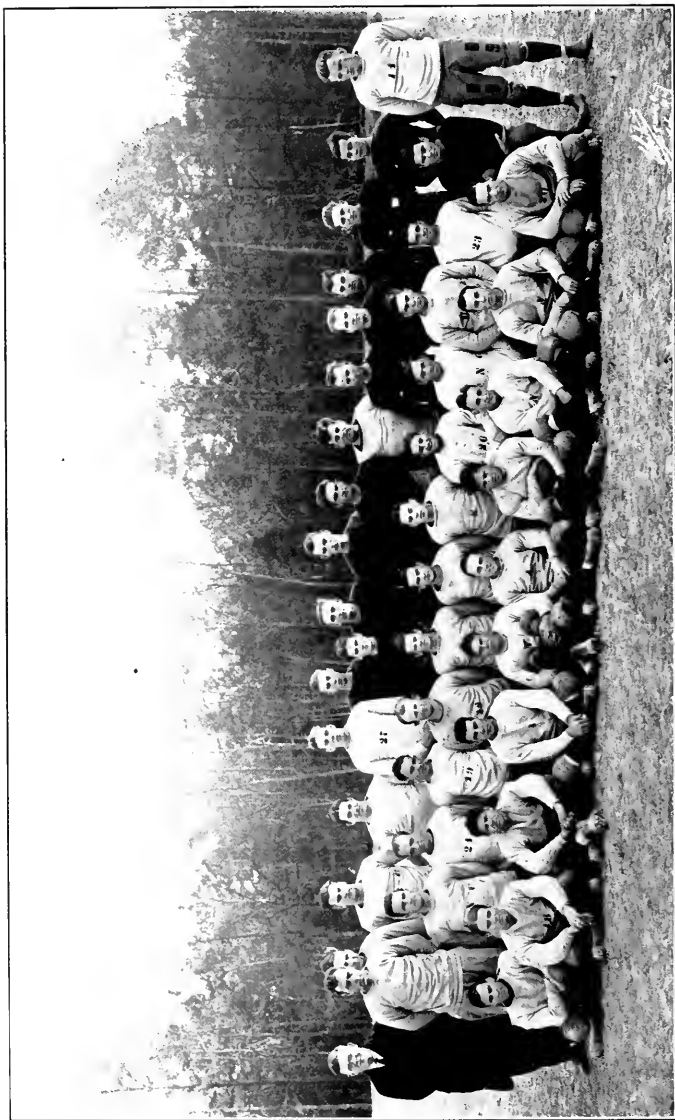

While much of the success of the past seasons is due to Coach Bill and Bob there are others to which much credit is due. In the words of Coach Bill, who is a person of few words, "You can't give too much credit to Grady Pritchard. He started work the minute he was elected and worked hard until the last minute of the Virginia game. Yes, you can't give too much credit to him". So spoke Coach Bill, and since he says so little, everything he says like that is worth its space in any book.

The time has come in the history of the University when she no longer bows her head before a rival. The University will lose games in the future just like she has in the past, but at the same time it will mean that some rival has a wonderful team and not that Carolina has a poor team. The athletics of the University are no longer financially staggering from one season to another. Under the wise management of C. T. Woolen, athletics are paying at the University and not losing. It has often meant that games which we would all like to see have been played in distant cities, but still it pays and the student body with the exception of a voice here and there, has had nothing to say.

Throughout the Athletic section the records show the accomplishments of the Carolina teams. With just this word we leave you with the record: Carolina's victory on practically every field in the South has behind it the support of the best student body in the South and that victory is the result of the support of a great State.

THE TEAM

The Season

THE brilliant victory over Virginia at Charlottesville Thanksgiving Day brought to a close one of Carolina's greatest football years. The University was represented by perhaps the smoothest running, best balanced eleven ever developed at Chapel Hill. Not a contest was lost in the South, and the remarkable showing against Yale early in the season demonstrated the strength of the Fetzer machine. The South Atlantic Championship was generally conceded to the Tar Heels, and in addition to this high honor, Carolina was classed with Georgia Tech and Vanderbilt as the "Big Three" on the Southern gridiron.

At the opening of the season, optimism reigned supreme. Eleven letter men and several good players from the Freshman team and Varsity squad reported for practice. Randolph and Merritt, two hard hitting backs with no previous records at Carolina, soon attracted considerable attention. With the exception of "Runt" Lowe, the entire 1921 backfield returned and only two Varsity men were missing in the line. The Fetzers had a wealth of material on hand and experienced no difficulty in finding capable tackles to fill the open positions.

Wake Forest was smothered under a powerful attack in the first game, played at Goldsboro. The Baptists had possession of the ball only three times, and Heckman's drop kick was all that saved his team from the humility of a 62 to 0 whitewash. Sparrow and Merritt frequently carried the pigskin for substantial gains

S. C. GAME

Carolina scored two touchdowns in the first eight minutes against Trinity, and the scrubs added another just before the final whistle, making the count 20 to 0. Fred Morris was the most consistent ground-gainer and was largely responsible for the first score. "Red" Johnston was held in reserve for the South Carolina game only two days off.

Sol Metzger's Gamecocks from the Palmetto State waged a stubborn fight, but Captain Pritchard's touchdown which resulted from a Raleigh. What was expected to be a rather easy victory turned into a hard-fought battle as State showed surprising strength on the defense and the Randolph-Long passing combination was a continual menace to Coach Fetzer's men. "Monk" McDonald exhibited some wonderful broken field-running when he dashed ninety-five yards for a touchdown from the kick-off that followed Long's beautiful drop kick. The Carolina quarter's punting was his best of the season, averaging slightly over forty yards.

In the Maryland game after the Varsity had pushed over three touchdowns, Coach Fetzer sent in an entirely new team, which although failing to score, held and McDonald hurled forward passes and directed the Carolina offense in a faultless manner.

The Tar Heels, outweighed twenty pounds to the man, presented the most aggressive running attack seen at New Haven so far, and held the mighty Yale team to three touchdowns. With Johnston and McDonald leading the onslaught, Carolina actually gained more ground than Old Eli, and carried the ball over the goal line once, only to be called back for offside play.

recovered fumble in the first minute of play, together with a place kick by Blount, enabled the Tar Heels to win 10 to 7. Snipes, a South Carolina substitute, broke through the center of the line for sixty-seven yards and a touchdown. Carolina registered nineteen first downs to her opponents' one, but the backs had a tendency to fumble as they neared the Sandlappers' goal line.

Next came the annual Fair Week classic at

V. M. I. GAME

Before the largest crowd ever assembled in New Orleans to witness a football game, Carolina defeated Tulane in a thrilling contest by a 19 to 12 score. Sparrow contributed a couple of timely drop kicks in the third quarter and the Tar Heels' interference was next to perfect.

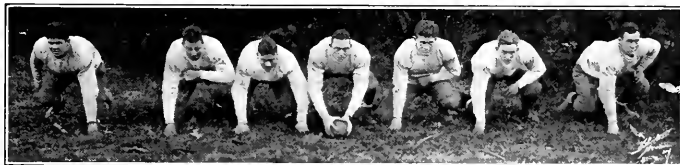

With only four minutes to play and facing apparent defeat in the annual Armistice Day game at Richmond, the eleven rose to heights of greatness and marched ninety-four yards through the V. M. I. defense for a 9 to 7 victory that left fifteen thousand spectators in amazement. After a fifty-five yard dash had placed the Cadets four points in the lead, Carolina launched a bewildering assault that turned the tide of victory. McDonald, Johnston, Sparrow, Merritt, and Cochran figured conspicuously in the sensational finish, while Sparrow drop-kicked a field goal for the first score of the game in the third period.

ON LAMBETH FIELD N. C. 10—V. A. 7

Davidson was no match for Coach Fetzer's machine in the next game, and although the scrapping Wildcats battled valiantly, they were forced to submit to a 29 to 6 defeat.

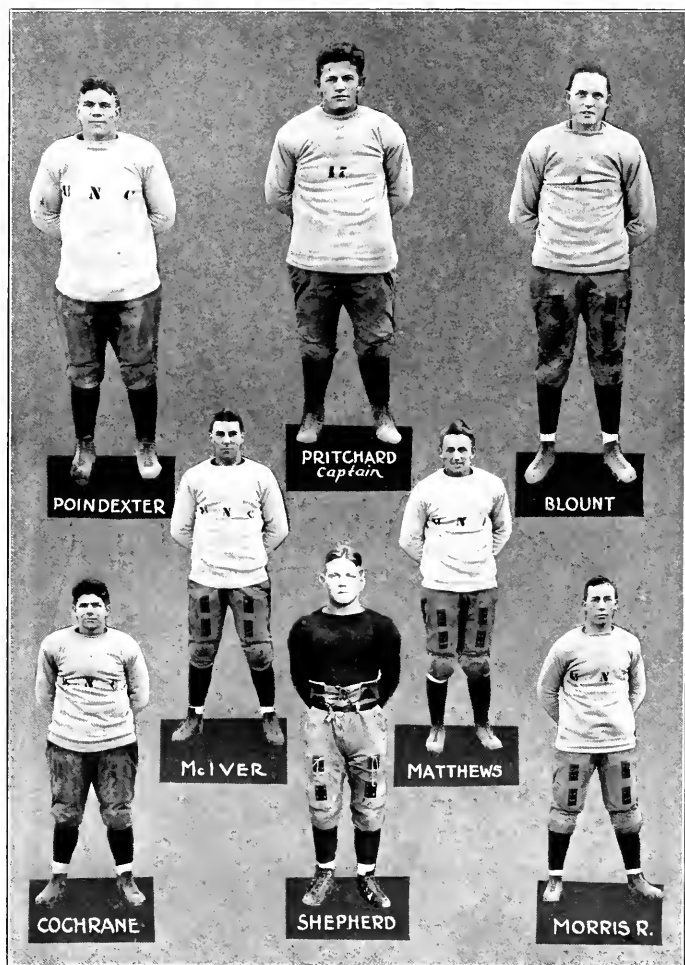

For the first time in history, Carolina conquered her ancient rival, Virginia, on the campus of the Old Dominion. The force and speed of the Blue and White attack once more snatched the laurels of victory from the grasp of the opposition, and virtually repeated the story of the V. M. I. game. Johnston's sixty-yard run came near being a touchdown in the second period, but Tommy Campbell's warriors stiffened their defense and held the invaders back. However, in the third quarter, Carolina broke through the strong Orange and Blue battle line for the final twenty yards that had been impenetrable. With the ball on Virginia's twenty-six yard line, Johnston received a beautiful forward pass from McDonald and dashed ten yards across the last chalkmark for the winning touchdown.

WILSON ON THE MOUND

hitting and consistent fielding by the entire team, gave Carolina the greatest honors in baseball that she has ever enjoyed.

Coach Bill Fetzner had ten letter men from the 1921 championship team on hand when the season opened, and fans were naturally optimistic from the start. "Red" Johnston was placed in right field and Bonner finally made a regular berth for himself in the left garden.

Captain Llewellyn and "Lefty" Wilson completed their college careers on the diamond in a blaze of glory. The former pitched and won eleven straight contests in which he struck out sixty-six batsmen and allowed but fifty hits. Wilson led the team in hitting with a mark of .351, obtained in twenty games, and won four times from the hurling mound. Bryson let Virginia down with three singles in the annual Greensboro classic, which brought his list of victories over the Old Dominion to three.

Captain-elect Roy Morris, "Mule" Shirley, and Fred Morris also batted their way into the select society of the three hundred class. "Monk" McDonald and Joe McLean formed a brilliant combination that was the backbone of the inner defense, while Shirley was recognized as the peer of college first basemen in the South.

Llewellyn twirled the Tar Heels to victory over Furman, Wake Forest, and Davidson, and halted the Georgia Bulldogs after they had tied the score in the eighth inning. Bryson was a complete mystery to Lynchburg College, and "Lefty" Wilson defeated Trinity 9 to 5, with Jimmy Simpson opposing him.

On the Virginia trip, Carolina won from V. P. L., 7 to 4. "Big Lew" pitched a fine game, while Fred Morris and McDonald cracked out a home run and two singles each. Washington and Lee scored nine times in the last inning and won the first contest of the series 9 to 8, but the Tar Heels secured sweet revenge the next day when they won 6 to 3. McDonald connected for another circuit smash in this game. With unfaltering support, Llewellyn shut out the Old Dominion 6 to 0 in the last game of the trip.

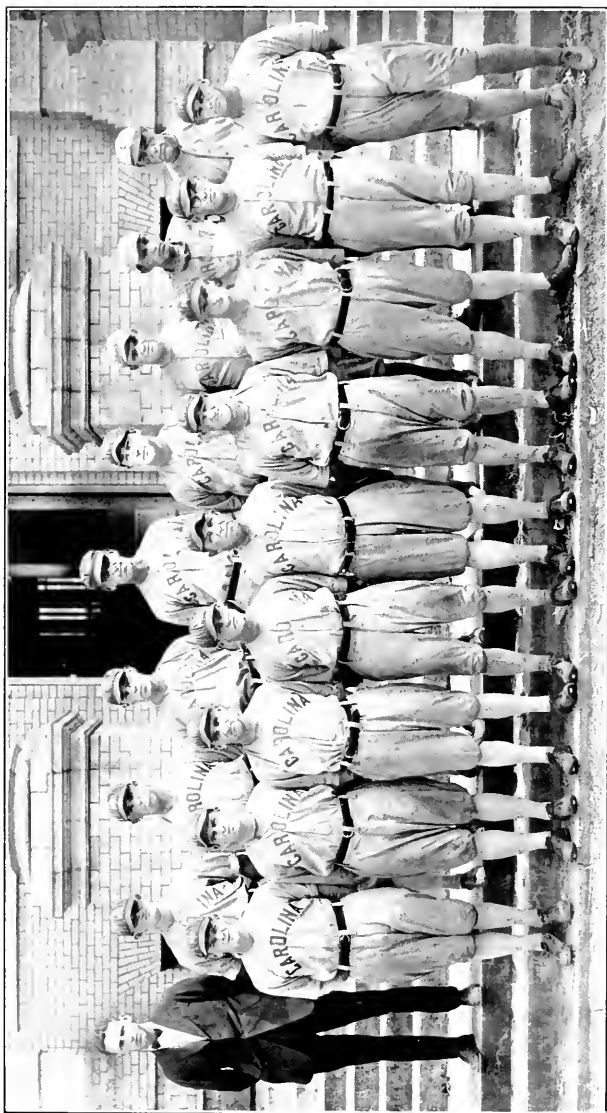

Wake Forest was easily beaten, and after this victory came the annual Virginia game in Greensboro. Bryson had the Orange and Blue batters at his mercy, while his team-mates landed on Holland for ten safeties. The final score was 4 and 0. "Lefty" Wilson was invincible in the last game with rained out, but Swarthmore was defeated 3 to 0 and City College of New York was the victim of an avalanche of hits. "Red" Johnston clouted out a home run while the entire team collected a total of thirty bases on clean safeties.

The final game of the Northern trip was won from New York University by a sensational tenth-inning rally. "Lefty" Wilson was the hitting and pitching star, while Johnston's big red bat was responsible for another homer and Shirley's triple tied the score in the ninth, after N. Y. U. had forged ahead.

TRINITY GAME
Finish of Monk's Home Run

The Generals could not solve Bryson's delivery in the first of a three-game stand on the home grounds, and Captain Llewellyn chalked up his second victory over State on the following day, 4 to 1.

The final battle of the year was featured by the most spectacular ninth-inning rally ever seen on Emerson Field. With Trinity three runs ahead, a succession of errors and hits, including the longest home run of the season by "Casey" Morris, netted four scores and kept the intrastate record of the Tar Heels unblemished. McDonald and McLean contributed home runs.

BASKETBALL SQUAD

The Season

FOR the first time in history, a Carolina basketball team forged its way to the undisputed possession of the South Atlantic crown. Without the services of a coach, Captain McDonald led his quint through fifteen straight victories only to be eliminated in the second round of the Southern Intercollegiate tournament. Having already defeated several of the strongest teams in the South, the Tar Heels were expected to repeat their 1922 performance, and their 34 to 32 reverse was a complete surprise.

With four letter men from the Southern championship five of 1922 in uniform, and Sam McDonald, an experienced forward, out for the team, another tournament winner was predicted. Green and Sam McDonald, forwards; Carmichael, center; Captain "Monk" McDonald and Mahler, guards; composed the five that started practically every game.

Two victories over Durham Y. M. C. A. and a 38 to 26 win from Wake Forest early in the season created plenty of enthusiasm while a 33 to 22 triumph against Mercer, Carolina's opponent in the final game of the 1922 tourney, proved that the Blue and White quint was a serious obstacle in the way of would-be title winners.

On the Virginia trip, McDonald's team established a record by winning every game. V. M. I. was defeated 26 to 20, and Washington and Lee followed the next night in a hard-fought contest. After playing Lynchburg College, Carolina won from Trinity by one point on the Angier Duke gymnasium floor.

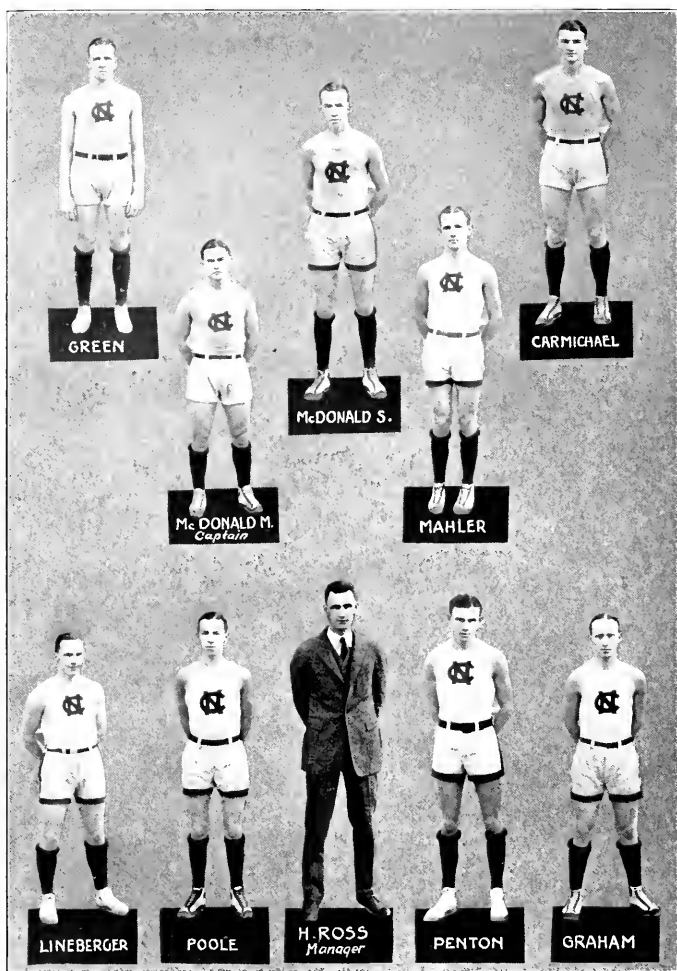

Jimmy Poole's basket in the final minute of play gave Wake Forest a death blow and captured a 25 to 23 battle for the Tar Heels. Florida was the next victim of a bewildering attack, and Trinity was again defeated 36 to 32. N. C. State was outclassed by comfortable margins in both games, while Virginia could not stop the smooth-working offense of the Blue and White machine and lost 39 to 16.

Then came the Atlanta tournament. The Tar Heels staged a brilliant comeback in the final minutes and came through the first round with a 28 to 21 victory over Mississippi College. However, they could not hold the four-point lead gained in the first half against the University of Mississippi and went down to defeat 34 to 32 when an opposing player caged a basket almost simultaneously with the timekeeper's whistle.

Carmichael was the highest scorer with 231 points and Captain-elect Green obtained the most field goals, ringing sixty-eight. Sam McDonald ranked third in individual scoring, while Mahler and Captain McDonald formed a strong defensive combination and nearly equaled their forwards in shooting from the floor.

UNDER the guiding hand and watchful eye of Coach Bob Fetzer, track reached greater heights of popularity at the University than it had ever before attained. With a moderate amount of good material on hand at the opening of the season, Coach Bob succeeded in developing several excellent men. A large number of Freshmen and Upper Classmen ran on the cinder path and participated in the field events, and more enthusiasm was shown concerning the records being made by Carolina than had ever been manifested.

The first Annual Indoor Track Meet, held in Durham in March, was a complete triumph for Carolina. The Blue and White collected 40 points, N. C. State followed with 25, and Wake Forest, Trinity, and Elon brought up the rear. Some splendid running was exhibited by the relay team, composed of P. J. Ranson, Murchison, Ambler, and Harden.

CAROLINA-TRINITY—START AND FINISH OF 440-YD. RUN

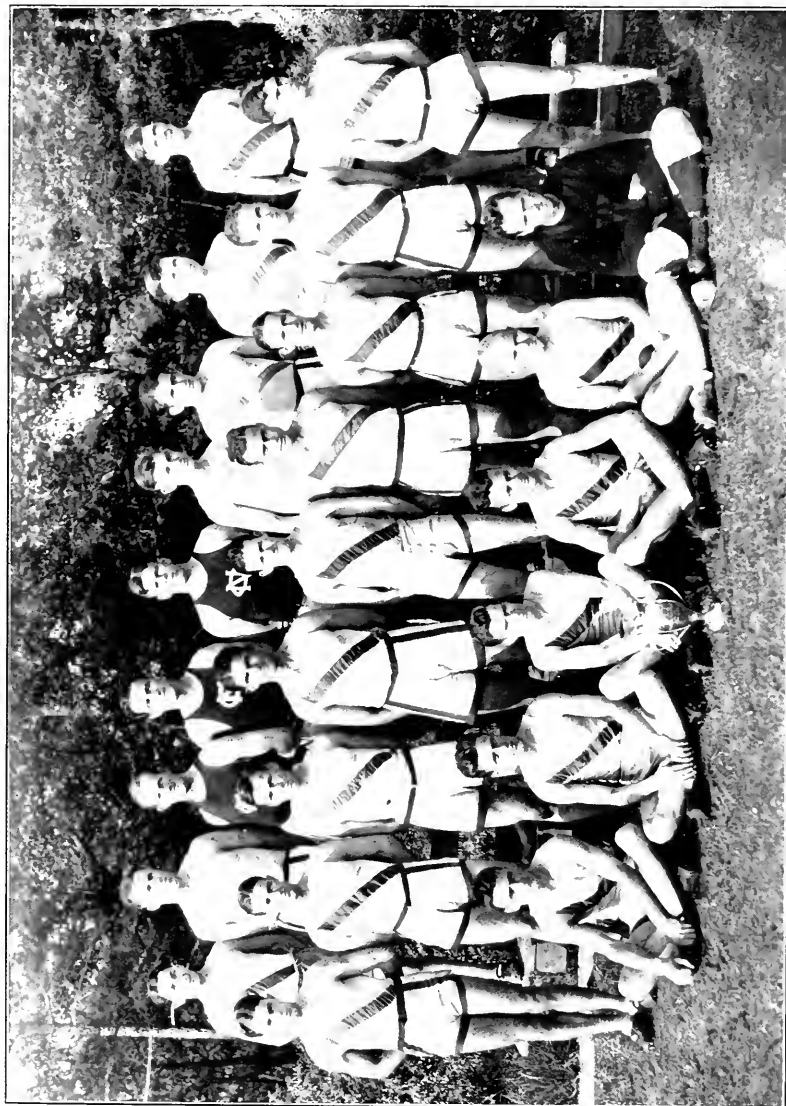

Coach Fetzer's men captured ten first places in the Trinity-Carolina meet and piled up $87\frac{1}{2}$ points to their opponents' $38\frac{1}{2}$. Purser finished first in the two-mile race without difficulty and Sinclair made good time in the 220-yard dash.

Carolina won the state meet, held in connection with the Olympic Games. The Tar Heels obtained $54\frac{1}{2}$ points to $47\frac{1}{2}$ points for N. C. State, and 37 points for Davidson. Sinclair won first place in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes, while Purser, Woodard, and Ranson made excellent showings.

The team was composed of: Sinclair, P. J. Ranson, R. L. Ranson, M. D. Ranson, Woodard, Van Landingham, Purser, Poindexter, Gierseh, Abernathy, and Norris. The calibre of the Freshman team was encouraging.

The Season

CAROLINA won the Southern title in tennis after meeting several of the strongest college teams in Dixie. Tench and William Coxe, Captain Hume Bardin, Robert Johnston, and G. S. Bruton, composed the team which won 70 out of 82 individual matches played.

On the Southern tour, the Blue and White racqueteers defeated Georgia Tech, Oglethorpe University, Wofford, and Davidson. The Presbyterians had tied Carolina earlier in the season, but they did not fare so well against Captain Bardin's men at Davidson. The Coxe brothers won from the Southern, Intercollegiate Doubles Champions at Georgia Tech.

Loyola, Lehigh, and Lafayette were conquered by the Tar Heels on their Northern trip, while the Georgetown meet resulted in a 3 to 3 tie. The remarkable showing made by the net artists on their trips stamped the 1922 team as one of the best in the history of the institution.

TENNIS TEAM

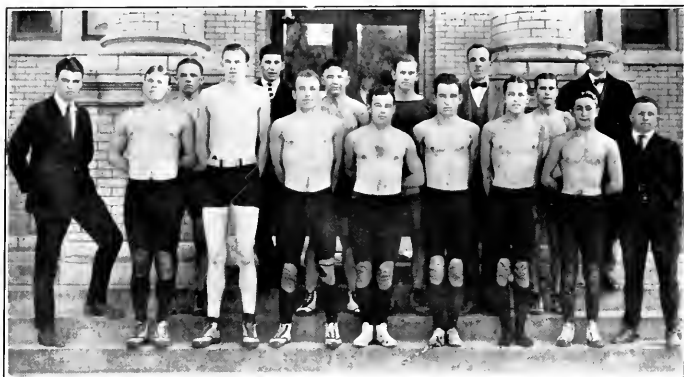

The Gymnasium Team

THE gymnasium team is one that works many long hours during the course of the year with only very dumb dumb bells, chest weights, and trapezes for an audience. Now and then they come forth at a basketball game and take the collective breath away from the crowd with hair-raising and, of course, breath-taking performances. When they put up their bars and lay their mats there is always one thing you are sure to see and that is nothing other than thoroughness in every detail, however small, that goes to make up a perfect performance.

Hours upon hours are spent on the bars before a candidate for a "degree in gymnasium" is allowed to put on a letter. "Doc" Lawson in building up the present gym team has turned out one of the best the University has ever had, and their work during the winter quarter at basketball games brought forth unstinted praise from those capable of a discriminating opinion.

Some poet remarked nonchalantly that "A thing of beauty is a joy forever" or words that left that impression. The exhibitions of the gym team have always been what the poet was talking about, although he may have had a daffodil or a June bug in mind at the time. When the boys swing into the beautiful work on the bar, physical grace and beauty have reached par excellence.

Wrestling is a new sport at the University as this is the first year a team has been attempted. The short schedule of this year is in part due to a late start in beginning practice, but the chief limitation was the lack of funds to finance an extensive schedule. The team had to support itself by means of door receipts and guarantees from teams met away from home, as the Athletic Association could not see its way clear to finance wrestling this year. However, with the fast expansion of the University along all lines, and especially in athletics, there comes the necessity that the Athletic Association take over wrestling along with football and the other branches of athletics. It is necessary that wrestling be recognized as a letter sport and financed by the Athletic Association if the University is to keep abreast with the other colleges of the State in every phase of athletics.

The poster is a black and white illustration. At the top, a banner reads "THE GORGON'S HEAD BALL". Below the banner are six portraits of performers, each with a name on a ribbon below it. The portraits are arranged in three rows: two circular portraits at the top, two rectangular portraits in the middle, and two circular portraits at the bottom. In the center of the poster is an illustration of a woman in a dress standing on a stone path next to a pond, with trees and foliage in the background.

“Don't Cry, Honey”

The title of this feature section, no doubt, puzzles you. Well, to start with we will tell you that better men than you have been puzzled by the same thing. In fact, we have been wondering for three days what it really meant and what it had to do with the feature section of the YACKETY YACK. A free book will be given to anyone arriving at a definite and logical conclusion of the real meaning of the term. We purchased a book on the Spanish-American War from the bird selling books in front of the postoffice and we will gladly give it away freely, in fact, we would almost pay someone to take it.

Scenery

Many things have happened on the campus during the last nine months of college. You know the term, nine months, is coming to be as important in human relations as seven and eleven are in a crap game. There is nothing meant by the above remark.

When the editors started in on the athletic section of the book they discovered that they were unable to do full justice to the work of the teams in the space the managers could afford. There was a conference between the editors and the business managers, and all began to dream fine pipedreams of getting two hundred bucks from Charlie Woolen. Turner boldly strode forth one Saturday morning to heard the lion in his den, or do lions have dens? Anyway, Thomas with his heart full of hope and his mouth full of words entered the sanctum sanctorum of Mr. Woolen with his request for the aforesaid bucks.

Two Nice Boys

Mr. Woolen received him with a smile that radiated the customary good cheer that marks the manner of the gentleman. Thomas' heart overflowed with hope and his mouth emptied of words. Charlie listened carefully and remarked a remark; just one. "I don't see how I could legitimately give the YACKETY YACK two hundred bucks".

The above story explains why the athletic section has no scandal connected with it.

Possibly the most interesting single event of the campus year was the sudden outburst of sentiment against the co-eds.

Now the co-eds, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three,

Two arguments for co-education and of Harry Chase, the thirty-ninth, strove mightily with the trustees for more tenting space in the plains of Chapel Hill.

In the midst of the plains there arose a mighty opposition among the Philistines. And the leaders of the opposition were the sons of Wade, of Cox, of Hill, of Hunt, and many of the tribes of Cathey and Brown. And they did make unto the world a mighty noise, like the sounding of brass instruments before battle. The Tar Heel did come forth in highly colored raiment and danced before the opposition of the co-eds, and aroused them to greater noise and much fury of heart.

Now the leader of the Tribe of Trotter spoke forth in public print, and in words, many words, denounced the girls. Like unto the action of Trotter was the action of the leaders of the tribes of Sweetman, the sons of Poindexter, and many others. Now Poindexter did wax wroth with the girls, and did in many high-sounding words compare them unto the tribe of Ham. He did call attention to the rich and fertile plains of the country called Greensboro and he did point out the advantages of the springs of N. C. C. W.

Now many of the tribe of the Philistines did gather in front of the altar of their Uncle Sam, and did cast many ballots, telling the girls of the tribe of co-ed that they should not enter into the fertile plains of Chapel Hill, sacred unto the memory of their fathers who had gone before them.

Now the tribe of co-ed continued their supplications before the altar of the great God Trustee, and did not heed the great noise or the many ballots cast before the altar of Uncle Sam. They did send many messengers unto the God Trustee.

Now after many days of supplication on the part of two tribes the Trustees did come together and did with many words say that unto the tribe of co-ed there would be given tenting space on the Plains of Chapel Hill. There was much wailing and gnashing of teeth on the part of tribes of Trotter, and of Cathey, and many others, and there was much rejoicing on the part of the tribe of co-ed.

Thus endeth the reading of the lesson of the conflict between the tribes.

Davie Comes Back to See His Poplar

Snowbird—Yes, Bird

In a small graveyard just on the outskirts of the city of— there was considerable commotion. A dead man had decided to arise, and was having a very hard time getting up through the dirt that had packed down on him for the past hundred years. He worked steadily at his task for two hours, and just at the break of day he poked his handsome head up through the turf and surveyed the rest of the graveyard with a reminiscent look in his eye, or eyes.

With a half whimsical smile he turned to read the inscription on his tombstone, but the ravages of time had so erased the lettering that he couldn't figure out just what had been said about him. His name was completely obliterated by the storms and rains of the hundred winters that had passed over, and since it had been so long since he had heard it, he was forced to turn away without even knowing his own name.

After carefully adjusting his clothes, which were rather nicely preserved, he thought, considering the hundred years or more he had worn them, he turned to look further into his surroundings, but found that a light wind had picked him up and he was traveling. "What a curious thing it is to travel so", he thought, "and what the devil will I say my name is when I meet someone in the air".

Turning so he would face the direction the wind was carrying him, he came face to face with another spirit. "Well, hello there", he remarked jovially. The other spirit stared at him coldly for a moment, and then noticed by the insignia on his coat that he was Mason. "Greetings, old dear, come, give me the grip", the other spirit replied. They then clasped their hands in the grip of the brotherhood and patted at each other's shoulders only to discover that there was nothing there. Every time one would take a slap at the other's shoulder his hand would pass right on through the lungs of the one slapped. After remarking on how unusual that was, the gentleman just recently out of his, asked how it was that his brother was able to travel against the wind. The brother turned slowly and showed a queer-

Two bathing suits and four other things

looking pair of wings or sails attached to the seat of his trousers

"Where can I get a pair?" Asked the recently arisen one.

"Just come along with me, old dear, and I will get a pair for you".

So the two joined arms and went along with the wind.

After traveling what seemed to be a great distance, the two dropped down to earth with the one with sails leading the way. Together they walked through the side of a building and into the ten-cent store at Durham. Picking out a nice pair of wings which were in truth, only a small boy's kite, the older and more experienced of the two tried them on his friend. After several tries, during which several shop girls had walked through them, the two found a pair that mutually suited them. Immediately upon handling them they had become invisible to others, just as they two were.

"Well, let's go. I want to see the city. It must be the biggest city in the world", the new spirit remarked.

"Good gracious, no! Why this is only a little town compared to some of them. We will look some of them over if you wish. I tell you what's let's do: let's go over to Chapel Hill, it's the thing everybody does here on Sunday. They ride in these new automobiles, they call 'em". Thus the older spirit rambled on as they hung over the Lochmoor Hotel.

"Chapel Hill, Chapel Hill, that is a familiar name to me. What is over there, pray tell?"

"Well, the State University is over there and that—"

"State University! Why, I founded that. Chapel Hill, that's it, come on, let's get going quick. I want to see the University. Come on, come on". The spirit was all upset over the prospect of viewing his handiwork.

"You say you founded the University?" When the other assented, the older spirit continued "Then you must be this bird Davie, they have built a tree for over there. I used to sleep there, sometimes, but now they have closed it with cement".

Foister forgot his necktie

Harmon holds her hand

"Davie, Davie? why, that's my name", interrupted the younger spirit. "Davie, Davie. Sure, that's what they used to call me. Now don't that beat you?"

The spirit of Davie, delighted at finding out his name, chatted along with the other spirit in an engaging manner after the fashion of spirits until they floated over Strowd's Hill and up over Dr. Henderson's house.

"I'm awfully sorry, old chap, but I have an important engagement with another spirit, a lady friend, and I am forced to leave you here. Watch your step". With this cryptic, the other spirit left poor Davie hovering on the outskirts of Chapel Hill.

"I'll find that tree they have built for me", thought Davie. So without further ado he floated around all the trees on the campus and finally found his tree. Perching on a limb, Davie thoughtfully surveyed the campus as he idly swung his feet. All the new buildings came under his eye. The hurrying students. The harried-looking instructors, and the easygoing professors and doctors of philosophy.

He observed the cheerful way in which everybody spoke to everybody else, and nodded his head in approval. He observed the charm of the old Law building and approved. He looked at Alumni and its queer windows and frowned. He noticed everybody frowned when they went in Alumni. So he went in to see about it. Wasn't he the founder of this blamed place?

The first place the spirit wandered into was Tommy J.'s office. He glanced around and saw nothing unusual there. Of course, it was all unusual for the spirit, all these typewriters and that sort of thing, but his short sojourn and his talk with the other spirit had prepared him for that. Besides, the other spirit had told him it wasn't just exactly good form for a spirit to show surprise.

From Tommy's office the spirit slipped through the walls into Mr. Warren's office. He observed the procedure there. Mr. Warren, of course, was observed, although the spirit felt it his bounden duty to pay some attention to the girls in the office.

"It seems mighty like my University is getting to be a machine", quoth the spirit as he glided out through the wall and onto the campus again. A quick survey of the old campus told him there was nothing unusual going on there, and being a spirit he had to have something unusual to stimulate him. It seems that all spiritual life needs a stimulant now and then.

Moving over to the quadrangle, Davie quickly looked it over. He had a little difficulty getting through the walls of the Quadrangle building he entered, some of the steel being especially tough. He glided into a room and found six boys playing poker. That was all right, he thought, he had often played a little when he was going to school. He then went on into another room and found a group playing bridge. Another group was playing blackjack, and still another was rolling the bones. Six boys he found poring over books. One was studying history, the others were reading "Jurgen".

"Indeed, this Jurgen book must be a very popular study" quoth the spirit as he glided out and over the campus. "I feel as if some of the boys are not taking advantage of my establishment".

Building after building he visited, coming away from each sadder and sadder. Finally he heard a great noise, like the noise of many pigs eating, and went toward it, wondering if they were teaching hogs or something. He found Swain Hall and watched the gang eat and then left with tears in his eyes.

Observing Peabody a few hours later he glided into the building and then came away with more tears in his eyes. He was almost weeping when he left the Library for Gooch's, and when he left Gooch's he was weeping, silently.

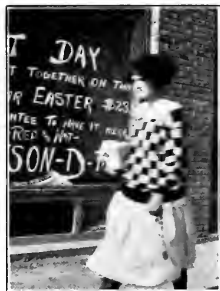

"Why, oh why, did I ever do such a thing?" wept the spirit hastening back to his tree.

Dropping down near the foot of the tree he saw the stone bench there. That was the final straw—that bench.

Laying his head down on the cold stone he wept bitterly, moaning all the time, "Why, oh why did I ever do such a thing?"

About that time two University boys came along and sat down right on his head.

Two of the girls up to the Hill for the Easter dances for the first time were very much puzzled over the terms "Shine", and "Little Lightning Bug", and "Flashlight". One of them remarked to the other, "My date for tonight must be a big man on the Hill. I heard Tom tell him last night that he was certainly shining."

"Now, isn't that funny", returned the other, "I heard Harry say the same thing to my date for tonight. In fact, he told him he was a regular little lightning bug".

"Well, I suppose we both are going with men who shine in college life" said the first.

Yes, Mabel, all the men who shine around here are big men. The University song is "Shine, shine, just where you are. Into the night, into the light, shine for the Lord where you are".

The Library steps is getting to be a hanging-out place for the scrub faculty, especially at night. They stand and talk and talk and talk. Then one goes away and then another goes away and then another goes away until they are all gone.

The group which composed the "Old Dutch Company" finally decided to find out what the matter was. (Please excuse it.) They did a little sleuthing around and found out the scrubs were there to see the co-eds home.

From that fact a new term originated on the campus, namely, "Library Door Johnny". Now, isn't that nice?

Speaking of the "Old Dutch Company". Last winter a very distinguished author from Merry Old England came over to America to tell all Americans how to write books. Dr. Archibald Henderson, whose taste in picking speakers is almost as good as his taste for—well, his taste for strawberries in early spring, had the good sense to bring him to the University for a lecture.

The "Old Dutch Company" decided that it was well within their sphere of action to wine and dine this distinguished gentleman, and promptly consulted Dr. Henderson about it. Dr. Henderson felt that it was proper for the Englishman to be entertained by the boys, so he brought him around to one of the eating houses after the lecture. A number of the Faculty members of the "Old Dutch Company" were present, and all went home feeling as if they had had a fine time. That banquet lasted two hours, but the memory of it will last in the minds of the boys until Old Gabriel toots the final toot of the symphony and the curtain rings.

The first course was a grape fruit with punch. The second course was chicken with punch and a speech. The third course was something else with punch and a speech. The fourth course was something else and punch and a speech. The fifth course was speech with some dessert and punch. The mints were served with punch and then there was some more punch. No party has ever been given on the Hill that had as much punch and kick to it as that party given to the Merry Englishman. And he was a merry Englishman. When he got ready to leave he waved the company a nice wave and remarked that he had had a "jolly good time". The company waved back and remarked in turn that they had a "jolly good time at that", and asked him to drop around again. Then everybody else waved at everybody and went home, waving at the "jolly old moon", the "jolly old buildings", and the "jolly old policeman" who infests Chapel Hill.

One of the members of the Faculty was recently presented with a beautiful baby girl. About three days before the presentation ceremonies the expectant father asked his little daughter whether she would rather have a little baby brother or a little baby sister.

The reply of the little girl should be written into the history of the University. "Ah", she said, "I would rather have a kitten".

Every man to his taste, we say.

The Now Famous Carolina Playmakers took their fourth State tour during the Winter Quarter, and we went along with them.

Now we have been a police court reporter in a big city and we have been marine editor in a wicked, wicked seaport town, and we have traveled around with evangelists and all that, but the Carolina Playmaker trip stands out as one of the most exciting and unique events in our young life.

You Quit, Now!

The Fountain that doesn't Fount

Puzzle—Find Shylock

The first night's stand was St. Mary's, the most famous and popular prison for girls in the South. Early Monday morning we landed in Raleigh and went out to the prison. We saw numerous pretty girls standing around at the window, but nobody asked us in out of the rain. Then we went down town to get lunch and then we came back to the prison to put up the stage.

The Playmakers carry about the most interesting piece of stage outfit one can possibly imagine. They carry a whole stage, and carry it and all the other baggage, except B. V. D.'s and longerie, in seven compact crates and packages. So it was our duty, we being assistant stage manager, or in other words a scene shifter, to put up this stage and hang up the scenery.

The plays went nicely at St. Mary's, and the working group left early the next morning for Wilson. Now Wilson is one of the best towns we ever saw, but the day on which we went to Wilson was without a doubt the worst we ever hope to see. It rained, it snowed, it sleeted, and then the wind blew and blew and blew. The trees were all covered up with ice and so was the sidewalk. The slickness of the sidewalk was uncomfortable, and on one occasion proved absolutely disastrous to the seating capacity of one of the Playmakers.

From Wilson the gang went over to Goldsboro, the home of Ham Ramsey revivals, and Ernest Thompson. Now Ernest had written one of the plays, and after the show was over the Woman's Club of his home-town sent him a large bunch of carnations of which Ernest was very proud.

From Goldsboro the players went to Greenville. From Greenville to New Bern. Now at New Bern, Bill Harris took a perfectly good coal scuttle away from Rooney Boone because he was afraid Rooney would drop it down the steps at the home where he was staying. The Playmakers have never been able to get the scuttle away from Harris, much to the disgust of Boone.

From New Bern the troupe came to Farmville. We got left in Farmville and had to ride over to Tarboro on a chug-chug train, one of these street cars that run by a motor. We will never forget the sign painted up over the door.

Speaking of cigarettes

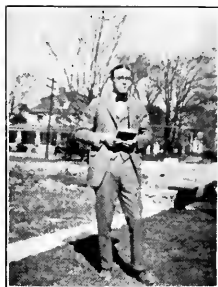

1923 YACKETY YACK

There was nothing else to do but read it over and over for an hour. It said "We stop at street crossing. Do not stop the ear on a curve".

Wilmington was the outstanding feature of our trip. The folks down there came to see our show in dress suits. Think of it! They asked us there what part we took in the play, and we told them we were the storm in "Off Nag's Head". They thought that was awfully funny. We stayed with Ike Bellamy's folks down there by the seacoast, and no king was ever treated more royally.

Fayetteville was next. We landed there in a downpour of rain and left in a downpour of sunlight and cordial good wishes. Fayetteville is a town with lots of pretty girls and a queer old public market that sets right in the middle of the street. The plays went better that night than they did any other night of the trip. The storm in "Off Nag's Head" was unusually good.

Durham was a nightmare. We landed there on the five-eight and had to put up the stage. We went down to get supper and didn't have time to eat it. The arrangements there were sort of awry, and nobody was in a good humor. The plays went rotten, and to cap the climax a panel we were packing after the show caught us and nearly broke our leg. We have never been a profane man, but had it not been for some of the east standing around we would have been very, very profane at that moment. A fine ending for a trip, that! Playing in all kinds of theatres and then coming to the finest stage in the State and having a panel to catch us. Such is the irony of fate.

Reputation

Some manufacturers assert that it is a handicap to have too good a reputation—too much is expected.

If that were so, then we certainly would be handicapped, because for nearly half a century "Spalding Quality" has been the standard by which athletic equipment is judged.

BEAUTIFUL forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense.—RUSKIN

Printing that will always be a Cherished Possession

HE production of books, programs, and calendars for the students of America's Universities requires an ability to originate printed forms that will be cherished possessions in the mellow years that follow a University career.

In the libraries of many of the "old-grads" will be found books, programs, and announcements preserved for their intimate memories and associations.

It is the production of this kind of printing that has brought to this organization its frequent opportunities to serve University men and women.

When the urge is for something better, we will welcome an opportunity to submit ideas.

WHERE GO TO COLLEGE?

THERE ARE THREE MAJOR CONSIDERATIONS THAT DETERMINE THE GREATNESS, OR THE POTENTIAL GREATNESS, OF AN EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTION:

- 1 THE PLANT, including grounds, library, classrooms, laboratories, and apparatus.
- 2 THE FACULTY.
- 3 THE STUDENT BODY, and its democratic standards.

IN ADDITION to the twenty-seven buildings already on the campus, the State of North Carolina is this year putting $1,490,000 into new buildings and equipment. The library of 108,000 volumes is spending $24,000 annually for books and periodicals. Eight thousand volumes were received in 1921-22, and one thousand and five magazines and learned journals were received on subscription. ¶ The Faculty numbers 125 of the country's best scholars. ¶ Speaking of the student body of the University, Mr. Sherwood Eddy, of Yale University, who has spent the major portion of his life studying in four continents, said, that with one exception, it was the most seriously thoughtful and democratic group of students he had ever known. ¶ Registration for fall quarter, September 18-19, 1923.
